PAYMENT DISPUTE — This modest Fairfax home, framed in roses, is the subject of a court fight between the 77-year-old owner, a widow, and a lending company which has repossessed the house for alleged default on payments for the funeral of the woman's husband. A Marin judge temporarily has barred sale of the home at auction.

THIEU VISITS HUE — URGENT TALKS

Expresses Confidence Despite Shattering Defeat By North Viet Troops In Quang Tri

SAIGON (UPI) — President Nguyen Van Thieu flew today to the threatened city of Hue for urgent talks with his military commanders on the situation in the north. He smiled and expressed confidence despite the shattering defeats in Quang Tri, 32 miles to the north.

Hue itself was rising from the near-anarchy of Wednesday to a semblance of normality. South Vietnamese troops who had fled southward from Hue along Highway 1 streamed back today on orders of their new commander who directed they return to Hue or be shot on sight.

The tough new South Vietnamese commander in the north constructed an "execution wall" in Hue to serve as a stark reminder to would-be deserters or stragglers. It is seven feet high, made of bluish-green sandbags, and has six-foot poles in front of it where soldiers being executed would be tied.

Thieu was accompanied today by Gen. Cao Van Vinh, who is Defense Minister, Chairman of the Joint General Staff and South Vietnam's only active four-star general. As they met, Communist gunners hit fire Base King, 10 miles west of Hue, with 100 rounds of 82mm mortar and 130mm artillery fire.

The battlefields were relatively quiet today although Communist forces have moved in on Hue and were reported 18 miles northwest of the old Annamite capital, six miles to the west and 10 miles to the southwest. The major threat was from the northwest where they had tanks and new hand-launched antiaircraft missiles.

The air war showed no signs of slackening and figures released today showed the Americans were averaging more than 100 strikes in North Vietnam

U.S. Calls Halt In Paris Again

PARIS (UPI)—The United States broke off the Paris peace talks today for the second time on grounds there had been no progress.

U.S. negotiator William J. Porter told newsmen he did so because there was a "lack of progress in every available channel" of negotiation.

He told reporters outside the conference hall he had refused to agree to attend a session next Thursday because both North Vietnam and the Viet Cong refused to discuss a halt to the North Vietnamese invasion of South Vietnam.

Instead, both Communist teams scoffed at use of the word "invasion," and said the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) was not an international boundary and therefore there could have been no invasion.

Porter told the Communist groups last week that he would give them one week to reply to U.S. demands for a halt in their offensive.

Both Xuan Thuy for Hanoi and Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh for the Viet Cong denounced the U.S. move.

"Today they have unilaterally sine die (indefinitely) adjourned the conference, backed by President Nixon's threats to use all kinds of military measures. The United States has committed a new grave act of sabotage against the conference," Thuy said. He said Hanoi wanted to continue the weekly meetings.

Moscow reports said the talks were resumed last Thursday after a five week hiatus at insistence of Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev during talks with Presidential Adviser Henry A. Kissinger who made a secret trip to Moscow.

Kissinger had held 13 secret talks last year with Le Duc Tho, a high-ranking member of the Hanoi Politburo, but they got nowhere.

Speaking of his ultimatum last week to the Communist side to discuss an invasion halt, Porter told reporters:

"You guessed it—they came back with no answer to any questions. They apparently are not authorized to go into policy matters because they don't know what to say."

Before today's suspension Xuan Thuy, the chief North Vietnamese negotiator, indicated that more secret talks could be in the works.

The United States broke off the talks last March 23 on grounds there were no serious negotiations and that the Communists were using the talks only as a propaganda forum.

Porter returned to the conference table last week with a demand the North Vietnam and Viet Cong comply with his demands they discuss ways of halting the current Communist offensive.

EOC Will Consider Actions

By ERIK M. INGRAM

The Marin County Economic Opportunity Council agreed last night to form a special committee to consider filing criminal and civil complaints against employees involved in misuse of agency funds.

The Board's near-unanimous support of the investigative committee came during its first public discussion of a preliminary federal audit which charged the agency with misusing more than $100,000 last year.

"This committee should have open season on all wrongdoing," urged board member William J. Bielser. Other members agreed.

APPARENT TARGET

Main targets of the committee's investigation apparently will be former executive director W. Robert Lomax Jr. and his top aid, Alfred G. Edmonds, who together used nearly $12,000 for personal expenses. All but $2,500 had been repaid by the time the audit was released.

However, the committee also will look into allegations from some board members last night that other members of Lomax's staff shared his practice of using EOC credit cards for personal expenses.

"Other people (employees), but not all ... used the credit cards but paid what they owed promptly," said board member Thomas Mason. "It was kind of like the key to the executive washroom."

His claim was backed up by former employee Collie Gaines who said it was a privilege confined to the "upper crust" administrators. "The average staff member didn't know (what was going on)," she said, adding they had been warned by Lomax not to use agency credit cards for personal expenses.

CREDIT CARDS

The "three or four" employees said to have used the credit cards remained unnamed during last night's session.

"Only two people abused it," Mason continued, referring to Lomax and Edmonds. "Edmonds didn't do anything criminal ... just used more than he could pay back."

Mason added that Edmonds "got screwed by Robert Lomax" since it was the executive director who approved use of the cards. "Lomax is our villain, if we have one," he said.

Discussion of Edmonds, meanwhile, brought to light a strange exchange of letters between him and the EOC. Edmonds, now heading a poverty agency in San Francisco, apparently is under pressure to resign or be fired due to his previous activities in Marin, said Chairman Barbara Eaton.

Recently he sent a letter to the EOC containing a check for $700 (he owed about $2,000) and a promise to pay the rest. In return, he requested a letter be sent his employer, the Telegraph Hill Association, "exonerating " him of any misdealings while in Marin.

Mrs. Eaton told the board she had taken the liberty of forwarding the requested letter — prior to board approval — noting dismissal of Edmonds by the San Francisco agency would be "cruel punishment."

Waste Disposal System Offered Stinson Beach

$3.5 Million Proposal Would Take 2,750 Summer Population Peaks

By PAT ANGLE

A $3.5 million waste disposal system which would use treated sewage to irrigate pasture land in the hills above the community has been proposed by engineers for the Stinson Beach County Water District.

The plan, prepared at the district's request by engineers Richard C. Bain and John Warburton of the firm of Brown and Caldwell, was completed this week and turned over to Bay Area Regional Water quality control officials for approval. The Stinson district board and community residents will study the plan at the board's May 13 meeting.

The proposed system, designed to support a peak summertime population of 2,750 persons, recommends use of sewers only where septic tanks are failing or impractical because of lot size and terrain, although sewers could be added elsewhere as needed.

Bain said the system would support "reasonable growth" in Stinson Beach, a requirement water quality officials have established for any sewage disposal plan for that community. "This system would be adequate even if every available parcel of land in Stinson were developed and there were three persons living in each house," the engineer said.

The Stinson Water District Board began working toward a new plan last November after the State Water Resources Control Board killed a massive $8.1 million joint system proposed for Stinson and Bolinas by refusing to certify the project.

At that time the State Water Board cited resistance in the communities to its size and cost as the main reason for its action. That rendered the project ineligible for $2.6 million in state and federal grants on which its backers had counted.

The new Brown and Caldwell proposal calls for treating wastes by biological oxidation, filtration and disinfection, probably in a series of aerated lagoons which Bain said would

MISINFORMED, SUIT SAYS

Widow Fights Loan Company Over 'Funeral Money' House

By LARRY MOWELL

A poor, little old lady in a convalescent hospital filed suit yesterday in Marin Superior Court against a lending giant claiming it not only failed to inform her of the terms of a loan she needed to bury her husband but planned today to auction her home in Fairfax because she missed a payment when she entered the hospital.

Marin Superior Court Judge Henry J. Broderick temporarily barred the sale, which was scheduled for 11 a.m. at the Title Insurance and Trust Co. in San Rafael, until a hearing can be held May 18.

Aileen Pick, a 77-year-old widow who lives on Social Security payments of less than $100 a month, said in the suit she was attracted to American Plan Investment Corp. in April 1970 by radio ads and mailers because she had to pay for her husband's funeral and back taxes on her home at 77 Dominga Avenue.

But, the suit uaid, the loan was so cloaked in legal verbiage that she could not understand it and did not realize it was written to give maximum benefit to the company. The contract was written "with the intent of and had the effect of defrauding and deceiving Mrs. Pick," according to the suit.

Therefore, the battery of lawyers from the Marin Legal Aid Society and the California Rural Legal Assistance are asking the court to void the loan transaction, declare the company has no right to her property and award her $300,000 in damages plus excess fees she was required to pay, three times the interest she paid and $9,000 for nine violations of the federal truth in lending law.

It further asks the court to declare unconstitutional a section of the civil code which allows a company to foreclose on a property without a hearing.

Edward Weiss, general counsel for the company wpich acts as a broker between lender and borrower, said it is the first such suit against the corporation. He said the suit seeks things not even in the law and would "completely destroy the ability of homeowners to borrow money on their real estate."

The suit said Mrs. Pick used her home of 30 years to guarantee the loan of $3,000, which included a commission of $300 for American Plan. She was to repay a total of $3,901 for the use of $2,700 at the rate of $30 a month for three years and a lump sum at the end of $2,791.

But, according to the suit, "Mrs. Pick, who is totally unsophisticated in financial matters, has no understanding of the transaction."

Furthermore, the suit claims, the salesman made no attempt to explain the provisions to her and didn't tell her she could save $150 in fees by paying the loan back over 36 months instead of 37. Neither was she told she would owe the large sum at the end.

The suit claims Mrs. Pick wouldn't have signed if the company had let her know what she was getting into.

The company violated the federal Truth in Lending Act and failed in its obligation to disclose fully as well as violating the California Real Estate Loan Law by collecting $176 in unjustified fees, the suit alleges.

In fact, she didn't become aware of the conditions of the loan — which included sale of her home if she failed to pay — until she picked up her mail in April after four months in the hospital. Notices from the company informed her home would be sold because she had missed the December payment.

"Defendant American Plan made no attempt to inquire into the reason for the missed payment, but rather immediately threatened to take her home," the suit said.

She was not told until a month after she accepted the loan that her house could be taken if she missed a payment, according to the suit.

Cecilia D. Lannon of Marin Legal Aid Society said in the suit that on her limited income Mrs. Pick can't afford other housing in Marin and "her remaining family and old friends live in Marin and it is her desire to remain here where she has made her home for many years."

Homeowners Plan To Act For Open Space

Homeowners in northern San Rafael, so concerned about dwindling open space in the county that they are willing to reach into their own pockets, have taken the unprecedented step of attempting to form an assessment district to pay for a chunk of land.

(Lucas Valley residents, who last month voted to purchase the 285-acre Nunes ranch as a greenbelt and recreational area, already had a county services district for which only a few legal changes were necessary to take on the purchase.)

At issue now is about 152 acres on the old Pimentel Ranch, the ridge between Lucas Valley and Terra Linda, and 32 acres forming the crests between Las Gallinas Avenue and the Mont Marin area.

"We are willing to spend endless hours of our own time and a great deal of our own money

RUSH HOUR

The time when the traffic is so slow that the taxi meters run faster than the taxicabs.

Ancient Capital Returning To Normal; Units Regroup

HUE, Vietnam (UPI)—Nearly 36 hours of looting, arson and chaos appeared to have ended in Hue today. South Vietnamese soldiers began regrouping for a possible Communist attack on the city.

Most of the refugees who fled in panic south toward Da Nang were gone, and those remaining were stoically packing their belongings rather than rushing off in headlong flight.

For those remaining, even the main downtown movie theater was open with a double bill of "Madame X" and "Zorba the Greek."

One major reason for the halt in the looting and arson by South Vietnamese troops who burned the main market square apparently was a broadcast by Gen. Ngo Quang Truong, the new commander of the northern military region who arrived in Hue Wednesday night. He went on radio and television with a brief speech telling all soldiers they must return to their units by 4 p.m. today or be shot on sight.

President Nguyen Van Thieu made a similar broadcast from Saigon, warning that "responsible law enforcement agencies and military units are empowered to shoot on the spot elements committing these acts."

From the panic and chaos that marked the previous 36 hours, the mood of the city today—and of U.S. officials still here—was quiet expectation mixed with cautious optimism. The officials expected a Communist attack on the city within days, but were hopeful the South Vietnamese might be prepared to meet it since some of the soldiers of the 3rd Infantry Division and marine, ranger and armored units that were routed at Quang Tri have reported for duty.

Veterans March At Kent State

KENT, Ohio (UPI) — About 100 Vietnam veterans led 400 Kent State University students in a silent parade Thursday in memory of the four students shot to death by National Guard troops two years ago. (See another story, page 19.)

Many of the veterans were dressed in fatigues and wore medals. They said they also were marching to protest the war in Vietnam.

The four students were shot and Killed by Guardsmen May 4, 1970, during a campus demonstration protesting the expansion of the war in Indochina.

Mountain's Fate Still Undecided

By JEFF GREER

The Little King Mountain controversy in Larkspur refuses to be laid at rest.

Before a small and mostly unwary audience, the city council last night voted 3-2 to reconsider Monday night's vote and set 8 p.m. May 15 for redeciding the issue. (Other Larkspur council stories, page 6.)

Most citizens thought the original vote had buried the application to scrape 360,000 cubic yards from Little King's crown and spread it as fill on 25 acres of marshlands between Magnolia Avenue and Corte Madera Creek.

Mayor William G. Fleckles and other councilmen stressed that mistaken legal advice from their assistant city attorney had resulted in a 3-2 decision Monday upholding the Larkspur Planning Commission's unanimous denial of the excavation permit.

The permit seekers, Paul Vincilione, his wife Alice, who is executrix of the Adolph A. Tiscornia estate, and their lawyer, Wallace S. Myers, asked the council last night to reconsider. Myers said the couple would seek court action if necessary to gain a go-ahead for the project.

Councilman Neil R. Brixon moved for the reconsideration. Any compromise reached would be "time well spent," he said. He favored naming a committee of two councilmen and city staff members to work out a modified grading plan with the Vinciliones.

Councilman Robert H. Lee, who moved Monday night to deny the permit, stuck by his guns. He was again joined by Councilman Joan L. Sestak, who argued that any changes in the grading plans should be heard anew by the planning commission.

Mayor Fleckles, admitting that he "agonized" over his tie-breaking vote Monday, read parts of a letter from Peter R. Brekhus —the attorney who told the council that if it voted down Lee's denial motion, it would give the Vinciliones "carte blanche" to proceed with the grading.

"I believe the opinion I gave to the council regarding the effect of Mr. Lee's motion was erroneous," Brekhus wrote. The council could have defeated Lee's motion, then made any other motions setting any conditions it wished for the grading permit, the attorney added.

Fleckles pointed out that Monday's vote followed "seven hours of taking the evidence," and said it should not be necessary to reopen the hearing to the audience May 15. However, he and City Atty. Robert W. Elliott reassured Mrs. Sestak that the council could vote to reopen the hearing to the floor.

Brixon and Councilman Malvino argued that the Vinciliones had been seeking the permit since February, and should not be forced to start all over again with planning commission hearings because of a mistake by the city's legal adviser.

Three audience members opposed the reconsideration.

"I thought it was all over" after Monday night's vote, complained Joy Losee, "and two days later we're back discussing it again.

Charles A. Brouse of the Larkspur Town Meeting and former mayor Lesly A. Daveler said the applicants should start all over again with the planning commission, if they make any major changes in the application to overcome council objections to the permit.

"People should be given every opportunity to settle a conflict," attorney Myers argued. "But we will not submit a new application."

Humphrey Beats McGovern In Ohio

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)—Sen. Hubert Humphrey apparently defeated Sen. George McGovern today in the prolonged Ohio presidential primary by scoring narrow wins in the Democratic strongholds of Akron and Dayton to corner the state's 38 at-large delegates.

(See another story, page 10.)

With 95 per cent of the state's polling places reporting, Humphrey had 454,772 votes; McGovern, 431,714; Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, 97,530; Sen. Henry M. Jackson, 88,459 and former Sen. Eugene McCarthy, 24,491.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Patrol Ambushed

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Five men with submachine guns ambushed an army patrol in a Roman Catholic village north of Belfast today. An army spokesman said "miraculously no one was hit."

Earlier, gunmen wounded two soldiers in Belfast and three policemen in Londonderry, none seriously, the spokesman said.

An army patrol in battle dress with black grease smeared on their faces had just turned a corner in the Roman Catholic village of Kilrea, 45 miles north of Belfast when five gunmen opened up.

At Carrickefergus, the mainly Protestant seaside town northeast of Belfast where bombs in a synthetic fibers plant Monday killed one worker and injured 15, two Roman Catholic pubs were firebombed.

Cancer Kills Bruce Cabot, 69

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Bruce Cabot, who costarred in the movie "King Kong" and became a top character actor, died of lung cancer Wednesday. He was 69.

Cabot

Cabot was the grandson of a French ambassador to the United States. He was born Jacques de Bujac in Carlsbad, N.M., in 1903 and became a cowboy, oilfield worker and boxer before taking up acting.

Cabot made his screen debut as the villain in "Roadhouse Murder." He played the human hero in "King Kong" with Fay Wray, as an explorer who brings an enormous gorilla from Africa to the United States.

That brought him a series of starring roles in undistinguished pictures. Then he moved into character roles.

Flash Floods

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Torrents of rain brought flash floods that swept away automobiles and trees, and rose to the second floor of buildings last night.

City officials said the death toll was 16.

"It was the worst cloudburst in the Mexico City area in 50 years," a city hall spokesman said.

As the storm swept out of the Ajusco Mountains south of the city, hail piled up as high as the roofs of some dwellings, residents reported.

Sees Arms Treaty

LONDON (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State William P. Rogers has told British leaders he is confident President Nixon will sign an agreement on strategic arms limitations at his summit talks in Moscow later this month, American sources said today.

But agreement with the Soviet on the Middle East during the Moscow conference is "entirely unlikely," they said.

Rogers, on tour of European capitals to discuss Nixon's forthcoming Moscow trip, met with Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home and later was seeing Prime Minister Edward Heath.

Says Costs Eased

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Price Commission, citing a decline in the rate of increase of food prices, has decided not to recommend additional controls over agricultrual products.

C. Jackson Grayson Jr., the commission chairman, told a news conference yesterday there had been "sufficient easing of the rate of increase in food prices to where it is not necessary to take action at this point in time."

Last month Grayson hinted at the possibility of direct controls on food prices after retail food costs posted their sharpest increase in 14 years.

Raw agricultural products now are exempt from price controls. Grayson said the commission also chose not to act because of the danger of "disrupting a very delicate supply-and-demand situation."

Complicated Rocks

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Apollo 16 Commander John W. Young looked at some of the battered, fragmented rocks he and Charles M. Duke picked up on the moon and said yesterday their story is going to be "mighty complicated" to unravel.

The analysis of the first samples of the lunar highlands will come after scientists complete the painstaking routine of carefully unwrapping each specimen and cleaning, describing, photographing, and cataloging them.

The process continued today and was not expected to be completed until the end of May.

Tanker Explosion

MASSENA, N.Y. (UPI) — Two explosions today ripped through a hold of a tanker which recently dropped off its load of petroleum products, killing the captain and injuring four crewmen.

The captain was identified as Charley Stanley, 53, Cleveland. He apparently died of head injuries, said Dr. C. L. Weston.

One crewman, Edwin S. Marek, Sturgeon Bay, Wis., the third officer, was seriously injured with burns to the face, hands and face, while the other three crewmen were not severely burned, Weston said.

Love Affair With A Car Is Costly

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The average automobile owner's love affair with his 1972 car will cost him $13,552.95 during the next 10 years, the government said today.

That amount represents the cost of driving and maintaining a new standard size sedan for a 10-year, 100,000 mile period.

According to a Federal Highway Administration (FHA) publication called "Cost of Operating an Automobile", the operation and maintenance bill breaks down to 13.5 cents per mile.

The publication warns owners "the purchase price is only the first step in a long line of costs that must be paid" before the car is scrapped.

By the time the car reaches the 100,000-mile mark, the owner will have spent $2,787 for 7,350 gallons of gasoline, it claimed.

Maintenance and repairs will total $2,147 and the insurance bill will total $1,350.

"Garaging, parking, and tolls" will cost another $1,800, and the driver's state and federal automotive tax bill, most of which goes to support the highway trust fund, will amount to $1,319.

The FHA said it used the figure of $4,379 as the cost of the new four-door fully equipped 1972 sedan. At the end of the 10-year period the car will depreciate to the point where it would have no trade-in value, so the original cost of the car was added to the overall bill.

But the owners of compact cars will pay less. "It will cost the owner of a 1972 compact car $10,807.60 —or 10.8 cents a mile over a 10-year, 100,000 mile period," it said. The owner of a 1972 subcompact will put out $9,444.03 or 9.4 cents a mile, the publication said.

Drug Charge Jury Trial Set June 19

A jury trial has been set for the week of June 19 in Marin Superior Court for Laura Rennick, age and address unknown, who is charged with possessing codeine and metamphetamine.

WOUNDED SOLDIER IN RETREAT

A dazed South Vietnamese soldier, wounded during the retreat from Quang Tri, sat in Hue where yesterday beaten, ragtag soldiers who survived the long 35-mile march from besieged Quan Tri City went on a rampage. They looted stores and burned a marketplace and cement plant.

Turkish Jet Hijackers Surrender In Bulgaria

SOFIA, Bulgaria (UPI)—Four Turkish students who hijacked a Turkish jetliner surrendered today to Bulgarian police and released all passengers and crewmembers they had threatened to blow up with the plane, witnesses reported.

The students seized the plane Wednesday with 63 passengers and crew members during a flight over Turkey and forced the pilot to fly here. They warned the Ankara government that they would blow up the plane and all aboard unless three condemned guerrillas were released.

Bulgarian sources said the students set one deadline after another but negotiations with Turkish embassy representatives apparently got no where.

An announcement by the official Bulgarian news agency BTA said earlier the Bulgarian Foreign Ministry was maintaining contact with Turkish authorities "to prevent undesired consequences of the incident" and added "there exists a real danger for the life of the passengers and crew."

FDA Proposing Open-Door Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Responding to consumer pressure, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) today proposed new disclosure rules designed to convert the agency from one of government's most secretive to one of its most open.

The rules, drafted under the Freedom of Information Law, would make public for the first time virtually all data on the safety and alleged hazards of food additives and antibiotic drugs, reports of unsanitary conditions in food processing plants and even minutes of meetings between FDA officials and industry lobbyists.

If adopted and actually followed, some provisions could even prove embarrassing to senators and House members who often write the FDA seeking kindly treatment of errant food and drug firms within their home districts. Such letters have been confidential in the past, but would be made public under the new proposals.

Peter B. Hutt, FDA general counsel, said the agency traditionally kept most things secret under the presumption that most anything involving a company was a "trade secret" which is exempted from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Law.

Says A Union Fund Paid For Murder

WASHINGTON, Pa. (UPI)—A United Mine Workers Research and Information fund partly established by union president W. A. "Tony" Boyle actually was a murder fund which provided $15,000 to pay the killers of UMW insurgent Joseph A. "Jock" Yablonski, according to a prosecutor.

Special prosecutor Richard A. Sprague said Wednesday that the fund was created at a secret meeting attended by Boyle and Albert Pass, secretary-treasurer of UMW District 19 in Tennessee and Kentucky.

Pass is one of seven persons charged with the Dec. 31, 1969, slaying of Yablonski, his wife and daughter. Boyle, who won re-election as UMW president over Yablonski three weeks before the slaying, is not a defendant.

Three persons have pleaded guilty to the Yablonski murders and two others were convicted and sentenced to death.

Bourbon Shops

WINE NOTES # 6

There are lots of exciting things happening around the Bourbon Shops these days! Expansion plans are very much a topic of conversation and an announcement of consequence to residents of west and south Marin county is imminent.

We have been very gratified with the response to our Wine of the Month program, and a brief discussion of our philosophy regarding the choices of wines to be featured seems appropriate. We have weekly blind tastings to broaden our tasting experience and to seek wines of unusual quality and reasonable price to feature as Wine of the Month. We are interested particularly in wines which are not presently available in Marin so we taste many wines from wineries many people have never heard of. We have been amazed at the number of good, sound wines produced at some of the smaller wineries who heretofor had sold their wines exclusively at the winery, or through perhaps one of two retail outlets nearby. The wines of Bertero (which we now carry), Pedrizzetti and Bargetto are good examples of first-rate wines at very attractive prices. The wines are rarely classics (except perhaps, for the Bargetto Chianti), but they are certainly worthy of the prices asked. But the wine chosen as the Wine of the Month must be of unusually good quality for the price and our May wine most assuredly falls in that category. It is a wine from a Sonoma winery that we at the Bourbon Shops offer our total endorsement - Sebastiani Winery. We concede that most people in Marin have heard of Sebastiani so in one sense, we are violating our test in that we are not introducing a new winery to this market. But the featured wine is so excellent we felt we had to call attention to it. Featured as the May Wine of the Month is the Vintage Chenin Blanc of Sebastiani Vineyards. We recommend it highly.

If you are entertaining four or more guests we suggest you consider serving a combination of wines to accompany your dinner. You should take advantage of any opportunity to taste new wines so instead of serving two bottles of the same wine, we suggest you serve one bottle of white and then one bottle of red. Or perhaps, two reds, but of different varieties. Or two wines of the same variety but from different wineries, or of the same variety from the same winery but of different vintages, if you can find such a combination. (We have some available). You could also serve two wines of the same variety and same vintage but of different geographical areas. Another suggestion is to serve a nice, dry champagne (Schramsberg or Korbel Naturel) as an aperitif rather than the usual cocktails. You will be amazed how much more sensitive your taste buds will be.

If you are serving a group of ten or more you can do the same type of thing and add an additional topic for conversation by serving the wine from magnums of which we have a large selection. Or if it is just the two of you (a pleasant thought) use tenths, of which we also have a large selection.

And for golly sakes, use the proper glasses. Do not be afraid of the large glasses because they have a salubrious effect on a wine, add sophistication to your table, and call attention to your talents in the world of wine.

Towards the end of May we will publish in this paper a complete list of the California wines we feature. Please remove and save it, but be mindful of the fact that it will always be obsolete because we constantly seek new, good wines to include in our selection.

WELL, MARTHA, SHALL WE TRY IT?

These two Mallard ducks landed at the Greenbrae home of Independent-Journal Publisher Wishard A. Brown the other day, and decided they liked the place better than the bay. At left, they look the water over, then sample it and finally take the plunge. Brown said they stayed for a few days and were fed bread crumbs. When the pool service man came to clean the pool they got out of the water while he worked, then re-entered.

Werber Wants To Witness Childbirth

Former restaurauteur and Kingston Trio manager Frank N. Werber today sought freedom from jail a month early because his teen-age wife is expecting a baby.

Werber, 42, whose six month sentence for having and growing marijuana runs out June 13, was to be in Marin Superior Court today on a motion to release him tomorrow so he can be present at the natural birth of his first child by 18-year-old Diane Barrett.

Werber's attorney, Benjamin Dreyfus, told the Independent-Journal he is unsure if the pair is legally married, but added they consider themselves wed. He said the girl is living with Werber's parents in Tamalpais Valley while he serves his time.

In the motion, Dreyfus claims probation should be modified to allow the release immediately because the baby, due May 21, may be a week early.

Furthermore, the motion says, "At the said natural home child delivery procedures, the father is an integral and active participant, and his presence is considered medically and psychologically important both to mother and father, and to the future relations of parents and child."

Besides, Werber has been a "model and exemplary prisoner" since he was jailed Jan. 10 after a two-year court fight to avoid jail, according to the suit.

The bearded, bushy haired former owner of the Trident in Sausalito leaves the jail each morning in a brightly colored shirt for work furlough at the restaurant and returns each epening.

The jail sentence went with a $2,000 fine and three years probation.

Judge E. Warren McGuire, who ordered that sentence, was to hear the motion to shorten it today.

A jury convicted Werber in April 1970 of possessing and growing pot after Judge McGuire ruled that his claim he needed marijuana smoking for spiritual purposes was not a legal defense.

Werber was arrested at his luxurious home on Da Silva Island in Richardson Bay in October 1968 after federal agents were led there by two men who had brought six seabags of marijuana from Mexico.

Werber was arrested again in March and June of last year on drug charges at his home and each time Miss Barrett was arrested with him.

The evidence seized in the March arrest was suppressed by a superior court judge so no prosecution has resulted, and the charges resulting from the June arrest have not been pursued.

Private Fund Drive For Schools Gets Approval

The Petaluma Board of Education has formally approved a private fund raising campaign to raise money for schools and accepted new recommendations for school operations.

The board at a meeting Tuesday night was told by representatives of the newly organized Save Our Schools Committee that it hopes to raise between $40,000 and $45,000 to prevent schools from going on double sessions and to avoid the closing of Grant School.

Schools Supt. Lesly H. Meyer said he has reviewed the preliminary budget and recommended the teaching staff be increased slightly to provide a 29-to-1 ratio of students to teachers instead of 30.5.

He also recommended that Penngrove School be exempt from double sessions because of its small enrollment and the widespread attendance area.

Meyer also recommended that Grant School not be used to house San Antonio Continuation High School as originally planned. He said it would be more appropriately used for adult school classes or for programs sponsored by the Sonoma County schools office.

Gwendolyn Adkins, fund raising chairman for the Save Our Schools Committee, said her group would begin a survey of Petalumans today to determine how much money may be collected and how residents would like the funds used.

She said the committee would make a progress report at the board meeting next Tuesday at 8 p.m.

CALLING ALL CAMERA FANS

CAMERA HANDLING FOR VERY YOUNG PEOPLE

We discuss here, the mistakes most likely to be made by children with their first simple camera, and we explain how to avoid these pitfalls. Adults are permitted to listen in.

* Hold the camera as close as you can to your eye, bracing it against your nose and forehead. This will increase the viewfinder's accuracy and steady the camera. If you wear glasses, brace the camera against them and your nose.

* Don't jar the camera by pushing or jabbing at the shutter release. Instead, operate the shutter with a steady squeezing action. If the camera is the type that has a waist-level viewfinder, hold your breath momentarily while you actuate the shutter.

Now for you grown-ups, we have all the big answers along with a complete line of everything photographic.

STINSON

Wastes from the collection system would be pumped by a pumping station on Calle De Arroyo to a treatment plant on a hill site off panoramic highway just below Mount Tamalpais State Park.

The treated water, to be of a high enough quality to be usable for recreational purposes, would be pumped into a 36 million gallon, 7.5-acre reservoir, also situated in the hills above Stinson.

The engineers have recommended that the resultant effluent be disposed of by spraying it over 50 acres of cattle grazing land around the site of the proposed reservoir. They have also suggested the possibility of disposing of treated wastes in nearby Webb Creek during the winter — if the community decides it wants a smaller reservoir which might not be capable of handling winter rainfall along with treated sewage.

The plan calls for continued use of septic tanks in the community which are in good working order and a county survey of tanks is currently underway to determine which are usable. The engineers said areas which the survey may find suitable for permanent septic tank disposal include the highlands and property along Panoramic Highway.

Parts of the community which the engineers belive will have to be sewered because septic tanks cannot be used effectively include all of Seadrift Road, the calles and patios, the hill area below the highlands and the developed portion of Dipsea Road.

The system would cost an estimated $35,000 a year to operate, but Bain said that might be cut if its management is shared with Bolinas, now planning a similar disposal system. "For example," he said, "it may be possible to have one superintendent and one maintenance man for both treatment plants."

The newly proposed project would cost approximately $3.5 million, an amount the engineers said could increase unless construction is begun by Jan. 1.

The price would be about $1.4 million less than the cost of the defunct joint system, according to Bain.

He said the district is applying for $1 million in state and federal grants to help finance the project, which would leave $2.5 million to be paid by local property owners. Most of these costs are related to the system's collection system, he said.

Three possible methods of financing construction and operation — general obligation bonds, revenue bonds, and special assessment bonds — are discussed in the proposal, along with each's advantages and disadvantages and costs to individual property owners.

Bains said the next step is preparation of a complete environmental impact study of the project for presentation to the community at a public hearing sometime next month.

The regional water quality control board is expected to decide whether to approve the Stinson project by July 1. But Bain said water officials have stated they will not certify the plan to grants until a waste disposal plan for Bolinas is also completed and approved.

The water quality control board wants to be certain that together the project, will eliminate pollution of the Bolinas Lagoon.

WAR

per day and about 600 in the south by fighter-bombers. B52s also were heavily bombing areas around Quang Tri and Kontum in the Central Highlands.

On Wednesday Thieu fired the commanding officer of I Corps, the five northern provinces of South Vietnam, and the commanding officer of the 3rd Division whose troops fled Quang Tri and then carried out an orgy of looting and arson in Hue on Wednesday.

He named Maj. Gen. Ngo Quang Truong, a hero of the 1968 Tet offensive and commander in the Mekong Delta, to replace the fired Lt. Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam of I Corps to try to pull together the shattered units that were overrun in the capture of Quang Tri.

Thieu, emerging from his meeting at military headquarters in the ancient Citadel in Hue, the scene of prolonged fighting during the 1968 Tet offensive, was laughing and smiling.

"I've come to assess the situation and discuss it with military commanders," he told reporters. "I'm very confident about the whole situation."

WORD-A-DAY

LAND

to purchase the land in question and preserve it as open space," said Jerry Russom, president of the Mont Marin Homeowners Association.

To this end, the association in March won a 90-day building moratorium on the land from the San Rafael City Council. Owners of the property, who have proposed selling it for a townhouse and condominium apartment development, opposed the moratorium.

Russom, however, has said that his group is willing to pay a fair price to the owners of the land, estimated to be worth anywhere from $300,000 to $500,000.

First step in forming an assessment district so that taxes could be levied to buy the property is an appraisal, Russom said.

The association now has retained a professional appraisal "to give us a fair market price estimate on the land under its present zoning," he said.

"It is vital that we have this appraisal so we can give homeowners in our proposed district an accurate price per household when we circulate our petitions to form the district," he said.

To raise money to pay for the appraisal, the homeowners association has planned a street fair for June 3. The board of supervisors has agreed to closing Old Lucas Valley Road so that "a fair and flea market can be held along Miller Creek adjacent to the land we are trying to save," Russom said.

In the meantime, he said that he and other backers of the land purchase proposal, are trying to combat rumors and misconceptions going the rounds of subdivision home owners.

One of these, he said, is that the assessment district is being formed in order to combat low income housing. This is "totally false," Russom said. The dwellings planned for the land are in the $32,000 to $38,000 category, he added.

Neither are expensive single-family houses in the $80,000 to $100,000 price range planned, Russom said.

In any case, these questions are moot, he explained, because his group wants the land left undeveloped.

Another rumor that no construction could take place on the land is false, Russom said, because the San Rafael Planning Commission has said that the land is not too steep or wet for construction and could support "in excess of 400 homes."

"The simple facts are these — the Mont Marin Homeowners Association has decided to take a stand that development must stop somewhere," Russom said. The association members, he said, are not only willing to work many hours and spend their own money but are also exploring possibilities of getting federal, state or city assistance.

San Rafael Clubs Schedule Trips

Two San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department clubs have scheduled trips for the month of May.

The group also will visit Carmel, Monterey and San Simeon on May 16 and 17. Trip reservation deadline is also May 5.

The Junior High Youth Club will go to the Santa Cruz Beach Boardwalk on May 20. Parent permission slips are necessary, and reservation deadline is May 12.

before May 20 — brought assurances from past chairman Robert P. Simmons that the audit is not as bad as reported.

Simmons, a certified public accountant and board chairman last year, said it was his opinion that many of the items listed could be explained to the satisfaction of the federal government.

At his urging, the investigative committee also was charged with seeking answers to the audit's other findings, such as $15,000 being inappropriately spent on leased vehicles.

In other action last night, employees of the financially troubled agency were granted salary hikes of about $25 per month by the board.

The acting executive director, Benjamin I. Young of Belvedere, was given an extension of his $100-per-day contract and a bookeeping firm was granted an extension on its $87 — per-day contract.

The board also received an outline of Young's proposal that the agency spend the next four months planning its future. Services to the poor would be curtailed during that period since funds are not available to provide such services.

Weapon Charge Hearing Monday

A preliminary hearing has been set for Monday in Marin Municipal Court for Donald F. Stumpf, 22, of Oakland, charged with carrying a concealed weapon after he was arrested Monday during a traffic stop.

The California Highway Patrol said Stumpf's car was stopped at 3:30 a.m. while northbound on Highway 101 near Lucas Valley Road because it was weaving.

During the search, drugs as well as the gun were found, but no drug charge has been filed pending an investigation.

A passenger, 22-year-old Sylvia J. Nielsen, also of Oakland, has pleaded guilty to being drunk in public and will be sentenced tomorrow.

Citroen. The car that looks more beautiful after you drive it.

Not a Citroen.

Simply because Citroen was built by a small group of brilliant heretics who did not care about conventional design. They sought the very basic; the finest, safest, best engineered car in the world. They sought items such as: an aero-dynamically designed body, independent four-wheel suspension, front wheel drive and automatic jacking.

Let's just leave it at this; next time you're trying to judge the beauty of a car, drive it first. If you find all these features, chances are you've been driving a Citroen.

Water Need Is Critical, Aide Says

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Citing a "critical need for water this summer, a state Water Resources Department official has warned that agricultural losses could be as high as $140 million in one month alone if the State Water Project is shut down by a strike.

In an affidavit filed Wednesday in Sacramento Superior Court, Carl A. Werner, chief of the agency's water engineering office, also said there could be water rationing in the San Francisco Bay area and the state could lose thousands of dollars in revenues from reduced power sales if the project workers go on strike.

The document accompanied the state's reply to a suit by the California State Employes' Association, which is seeking a court order banning the state from "interfering" with communications between the CSEA and its members concerning a possible strike.

Last week, the project's 625 workers voted by an 87 per cent margin to strike unless the state meets their wage demands. They contend they are paid from 21 to 26 per cent less than comparable employes on federal and private water projects.

If the workers shut down the 600-mile-long project, it would be the first strike by state employes in California history.

Werner said it would be difficult to estimate the economic damage caused by a strike, but, using the month of July as an example, he said the loss to crops could range upwards to $140 million for that month.

Nixon Goes To Hoover Funeral, Says FBI Leader Was 'Giant'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon said today that "J. Edgar Hoover was one of the giants" in the nation's history.

"Let us cherish his memory, be true to his legacy," Nixon said during funeral services at the National Presbyterian Church for the 77-year-old Hoover, who directed the FBI for nearly half a century. Hoover was found dead in his home on Tuesday.

"Without peace officers we can never have peace," the President said in a brief funeral oration. "He was a peace officer without peer. He richly earned peace through all eternity."

The funeral services for Hoover, prior to his burial in Congressional Cemetery about a mile from the Capitol, came after his body rested in state for 22 1-2 hours under the Capitol Dome.

Capitol police estimated that about 17,800 persons filed past Hoover's flag-draped bier in the Capitol Rotunda, about 4500 of them during the first three hours he lay in state Wednesday.

About 2,000 persons attended the final rites at National Presbyterian, a spare, ultramodern building with arches and vaults characterizing the Gothic architecture of several hundred years ago.

In his eulogy at the church, Nixon said, "today is a day of sadness for America but it is also a day of pride.

"Once in a long while, America is a land of giants. J. Edgar Hoover was one of the giants.

"He became a living legend as a young man. His death only heightens the respect and admiration" accorded him in life.

"He had a great influence for good in our national life," the President said. "... the good J. Edgar Hoover has done will not die."

On Wednesday Nixon named L. Patrick Gray III, a lawyer and one-time submarine commander, to serve as FBI director until he can find a permanent replacement for Hoover after the November election.

Through this move the President hoped to avoid election year conflict with Congress that might have arisen had he nominated a permanent successor at this time.

Gray is an assistant attorney general who was an aide to Nixon when he was vice president.

Gray, a St. Louis native who graduated from Annapolis in 1940, was in charge of the Justice Department's civil division until Nixon nominated him to be a deputy attorney general in February. But his nomination has been stalled in Congress behind that of the man he was to succeed, acting attorney general Richard G. Kleindienst.

Nixon withdrew Gray's nomination after appointing him to the FBI slot Wednesday.

Gray, 55, wears his sandy hair short and still carries the erect bearing of the Navy captain who saw service in World War II and the Korean War. He was involved in Nixon's unsuccessful try for the presidency in 1960 and rejoined Nixon after he entered the White House in 1969.

The White House said Gray was not a "political man" even though he helped in the '60 campaign. After he was nominated to replace Kleindienst, Gray gave three speeches, one attacking AFL-CIO President George Meany for walking off the Pay Board; one claiming the administration had restored respect for the law; and a third accusing the press of inaccurate and biased reporting.

The High Cost Of Fighting Pollution

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that local governments and industry will have to spend between $22 billion and $26 billion on waste treatment facilities and their operation in order to clean up the nation's waters.

It added, in a report to Congress Wednesday, that the price of manufactured goods may increase by 0.1 per cent if industry passes its cleanup costs on to the consumer.

Ex-Councilman Appointed To Planning Commission

The Larkspur City Council last night voted unanimously to appoint ex-councilman Benton A. Sifford Jr. to the city planning commission. (Another Larkspur council story, page 1.)

Councilmen also agreed to let the city's planning consultant firm go after its present contract expires, and decided to consider hiring a full-time professional planning director and a secretary to expand the present city planning staff.

Sifford lost a bid for reelection to the city council last month. He will take over the commission seat vacated by new Councilman Robert H. Lee, whose commission term was to run through June 30. Kent B. Bathurst, city manager, indicated the council probably would appoint Sifford to a full new term at its regular meeting June 7.

Mayor William G. Eleckles said he would ask Sifford to be the city's planning commission representative on the Marin City-County Planning Council, which Sifford induced Larkspur to join. Lee was named as the council's representative, with Councilman Joan L. Sestak as alternate.

The council named Sifford after an hour-long closed session to choose from 11 candidates for the commission seat. Other candidates included former mayor Earl J. O'Grady, who also lost a bid for reelection last month.

Last night's council agenda called for another closed session on "progress" by the consultant firm of Sydney H. Williams and Corwin R. Mocine of San Francisco. The council held its discussion in public after an Independent-Journal reporter questioned whether such a closed session could be justified under the Ralph M. Brown Act.

The council last October awarded the firm a nine-month, $12,500 contract to handle the first phase of a two-part revamping of the city's six-year-old master plan and associated ordinances and policies.

Fleckles called for creation of the city's own full-fledged planning staff, in place of hiring any more consultants.

Bathurst said the preliminary budget the council will review next month provided $25,000 for use in planning and proposed hiring a "community development director" — professional planner — and a secretary in addition to the present staff.

Fleckles said he felt a need for more leadership and positive advice from planners in such controversies as the Little King Mountain grading permit application. Councilman Neil R. moved to notify Williams and Mocine that the firm's contract would expire after the completion of "phase one" despite the firm's proposals to draft a new zoning ordinance as part of the next phase.

The vote was 4-0 with Lee abstaining.

Lee and Mrs. Sestak called for a joint council-planning commission workshop on hiring a full-time professional to head the city planning department. No date was set.

Larkspur Police Will Get $60,000 New Home

Larkspur police will get a new, $60,000 "permanent" but relocatable headquarters in the city corporation yard off Dougherty Drive, the city council decided last night.

The decision was bolstered with an extra $10,000 gift woard the building cost, from the Schultz Foundation which already had donated $25,000.

The council last night unanimously ordered city staff to have the building ready to go to bid late this month, after the city architectural review board gets a hasty chance to revise the building's exterior appearance.

Architect Arthur M. Sestak — who is chairman of the review board and the husband of Councilman Joan L. Stestak — volunteered his own services to redesign the building after criticizing renderings prepared by the city staff. But the work would take more than a month, he warned. He was told there wasn't time for that much delay.

Councilman Neil R. Brixon, head of the committee which has been making arrangements for new quarters for the police, said no changes could be made to the building's interior, designed after extensive consultation with Police Chief Howard Clark and other Marin lawmen.

Sestak said he doubted the review board could do much to improve the proposed frame structure's looks in a short time, but councilmen argued that the city hall "broom closet" that is the present police station was bad for officers' morale.

Several audience members reminded the council that the Larkspur Town Meeting opposed any buildings in the Piper Park area which now houses the corporation yard. Brixon replied that the relocatable building would be better for police use than the earlier proposal for a large mobile home as police station, and could be used elsewhere later.

The city's attempts to buy property next to the city hall have been balked by the owner, Mayor William G. Fleckles said, and no better site than the park has been found.

The Larkspur City Council also:

RECYCLING — Agreed to allow Gregory C. Fearon of the College of Marin student body to speak for five minutes June 7, to outline his proposal that residents who recycle their newspapers, cans and bottles be given special low rates for their remaining waste pickups by franchised scavenger services.

JOB SURVEY — Split 2-2 (Brixon went home ill before midnight, while the meeting lasted to 1:15 a.m. today) on City Mgr. Kent B. Bathurst's request that the city hire Griffenhagen-Kroeger, Inc. of San Francisco to do a $2,800 job classification study on city employees. Bathurst said the city thus would have to do its own classification survey before budget time. Lack of a survey could bring reclassification demands from unions, Councilman Alfred Malvino warned.

COUNTWYIDE GENERAL PLAN — Set May 17 for a meeting with the city planning commission to discuss the countywide general plan in relation to Larkspur.

MORE REVENUE — Instructed Bathurst to prepare skeleton ordinances calling for increased income from business licenses, bedroom excise tax on new construction, and higher sewer hookup fees.

NORTH RIDGE — Heard Bathurst announce that Larkspur, Corte Madera and Mill Valley officials will meet May 22 on continuing efforts to preserve the North Ridge area as open space. The place will be announced later. Carol Staley of the People for Parks and Open Space discussed her group's countywide campaign for a regional park district either governed by the board of supervisors or by an autonomous, elected board.

STUDY ZONE — Amended city ordinances to allow creation of an interim study zone for lands in the city or about to be annexed, prior to establishing formal zoning and land use.

PROMOTION — Approved promoting Police Officer Eugene Adrian to a vacant sergeant's position.

YRTLE AVENUE — Set June 7 for public hearing on the application of Peter James Wikel for abandonment of a "paper street," Myrtle Avenue, next to his accounting offices on Magnolia Avenue.

REDEVELOPMENT — As steps in creating a regional shopping center between the Bon Air Center and the Hutchinson Quarry, formally designated the planning commission as the city's official planning agency and the council as a redevelopment agency.

LETTER — Instructed Bathurst to prepare a reply to a letter from Melanie Radke, 15, criticizing the approval of plans for the SDC shopping center.

MINE VIGIL — Mrs. William Delbridge and her daughter, Cheryl, pause near the Sunshine Mine at Kellog, Idaho, where her husband and son are trapped. The death toll from the underground explosion has so far claimed 24 miners. (UPI Telephoto)

New Route Will Be Taken In Try To Reach Trapped Miners

KELLOGG, Idaho (UPI) —A rescue team early today abandoned its efforts to get to an access shaft in the lower tunnels of the smoke-filled Sunshine Silver Mine where 58 men remain trapped by a mysterious fire that took 24 lives.

But as the graveyard shift began the gruelling three-hour trip back to the top, the day shift prepared to try to get through to Sunshine's No. 10 shaft from the tunnels of nearby Silver Summit Mine.

Fresh air was pumped steadily into the shaft's hoist room, 1700 feet above the area where mine officials insist there is a "good chance" some of the missing men may be alive. The day shift hopes that enough smoke will have been blown away so that they may reach the elevator and ride it down to the area 4800 feet below the surface where the men are trapped.

Above ground, friends, relatives and many of the 108 survivors held a prayerful vigil for the second cold night. Gov. Cecil Andrus called it the "worst disaster in Idaho's history" and officials of the Bureau of Mines in Washington said it was one of the two worst metal mine disasters on record.

As the fire raged on at the 3,700-foot level of the honeycombed tunnels of the nation's largest operating silver mine, an official of Sunshine said any bodies found would be carried up at the shift's end while any survivors would be brought out as quickly as possible.

Marvin C. Chase said fresh air had been pumped to the lower levels of the mile-deep mine since the fire erupted among old timber supports and that "any man in this area should be all right."

"A man could live in there for weeks as long as he keeps his head," said one veteran miner. "But, if a man panics and leaves a safety zone the smoke and carbon monoxide could take him before he could run to another safety zone."

During Wednesday's operations, six bodies were brought to the surface, but 13 others remained below ground because of dangers to rescue workers in the carbon monoxide-filled shafts. Five bodies were removed Tuesday when 108 men escaped the blaze.

Club Will Build Hub 'Minipark'

A new "minipark" inside San Anselmo's Creekside Park will be built by the city's Rotary Club, the parks and recreation commission decided last night.

Gary Howell, parks and recreation director, said the commission unanimously approved Rotary Club plans for benches, swings and other play structures. Work, expected to start late this month,, will be completed by the end of June, Howell said. Labor and the $1,000 cost will be donated by Rotary, he added.

At the request of the city council, a commission subcommittee will make an inventory of city open space. Howell said the subcommittee on June 7 will recommend which lands should remain open space.

The commission also decided to spend $200 to set up a summertime youth employment agency. The money will go "mainly toward advertising and phone bills," Howell said.

Extension Is To Next Week

The Independent-Journal erred yesterday in reporting that attorneys for both Fairfax and fired Police Chief James R. Orr have granted the Fairfax Board of Review an extension until today to decide the chief's fate.

Instead, the extension was granted until next Thursday.

The hearings on Orr's appeal of his firing ended April 25, and the board originally had until tomorrow to reach a decision.

Dry Brush Burning In Hills By Laguna

LAGUNA (UPI)—Night winds drove flames through more than 400 acres of dry brush in rugged hills two miles east of this San Diego County mountain village, the State Forestry Division said today.

Three hundred firefighters on the scene had controlled only 20 per cent of the fire's perimeter by mid-morning, and a division spokesman said there was no estimated time for containment or control.

Democrats Swell Marin County Ranks By 8,000

Marin Democrats, who became the majority party in Marin County last September after trailing Republicans for 19 years, have further increased their lead.

They have picked up more than 8,000 of 12,000 new voters registered since December.

New totals reported today by the county elections office were 52,544 Democrats and 45,235 Republicans.

County Elections Officer Peter C. Meyer said the strong Democratic gain reflected the new 18-year-old vote law and the multiplicity of Democratic candidates for President. An "overwhelming margin" of voters 18 to 21 years of age registered as Democrats, Meyer said.

The First Supervisorial District was the only one of the five in the county still with even a narrow majority of Republicans, Meyer reported. The district includes San Rafael, Lucas Valley, Terra Linda and Santa Venetia. San Rafael has a majority of Democrats, but the margin of some 700 Republicans came in the other portions of the district, he said.

Total registration as of the April 13 deadline for the June 6 primary election was 106,244, up from 93,777 at the end of last year. Major party registration at that time was 43,892 Democrats and 42,446 Republicans.

One-third of the new registrations were in Southern Marin's Third Supervisorial District, Meyer reported.

Other new totals, with the Dec. 31 figures in parentheses, are: Peace and Freedom, 903 (900); American Independent, 157 (159); miscellaneous, 52 (44), and decline to state a party preference, 7,353 (6,336).

Ambulance In Collision On Bridge

An ambulance carrying a heart attack victim to the hospital was involved in a rear-end collision at 9:50 a.m. Tuesday in a southbound lane on the Richardson Bay Bridge.

Stanley Robertson, 66, of Calistoga, was being driven to Stanford University Hospital when the ambulance was struck from the rear by a car driven by Charles Cisci, 65, of San Jose.

Cisci's wife, Lena, 63; the ambulance driver, Roy K. Bennett, 28, of Santa Rosa; and a passenger in the ambulance, Charles Del Nero, 24, of Santa Rosa were injured in the accident.

According to the California Highway Patrol, Cisci failed to react soon enough to the traffic which had stopped due to construction on the bridge.

According to hospital records, Robertson is now in satisfactory condition.

Mrs. Cisci, Bennett, and Del Nero, according to the highway patrol, said they would see their own doctors.

Auto Thieves Get Smarter

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Keeping pace with anti-crime developments, auto thieves are now using tow trucks, Police Inspector William Musante said Wednesday.

There have been five arrests in San Francisco of tow truck drovers for stealing and stripping cars within the past year, he noted, and the number is increasing.

Tow trucks were wheeled into operation, Musante said, because many newer cars have locks on their steering wheels and transmissions.

The tow trucks hoist up the front end of the victim's car and Musante said thieves can disengage a transmission in less than 30 seconds.

A Victory For Ex-Secretary

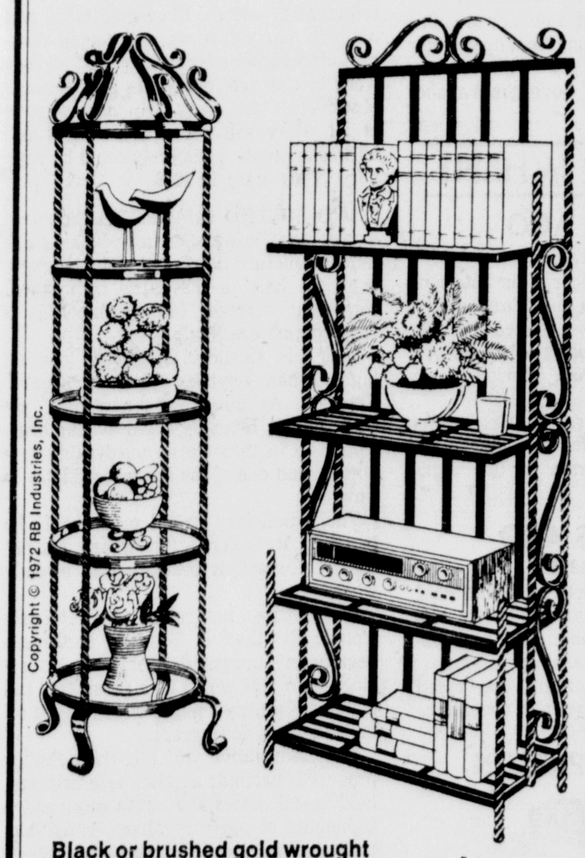

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —A 20-year-old secretary who quit her job because her boss subjected her "to repeated offensive rubbing and touching' has won unemployment compensation.

In a ruling announced Wednesday, the California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board said the woman's boss, the president of a dental laboratory, created intolerable working conditions for the secretary and that she was completely justified in quitting.

The woman filed for unemployment after leaving her job Dec. 13, 1970. But the employer appealed the case.

The secretary told the board that she complained to her boss when she decided his actions were not accidental. Although he then stopped the rubbing and touching, she said, the president began to "curse and yell" at her and criticize her work.

FBI Will Continue, But Not The Same

The Federal Bureau of Investigation will continue under a new director. But it will not be the same. When J. Edgar Hoover died in his sleep Tuesday, it was not merely the death of a man; it was the passing of an institution.

Most Americans alive today were born since John Edgar Hoover became head of the FBI. To most of us, "Hoover" and "FBI" were synonymous. And in fact, they were.

When Hoover was elevated from an assistantship in the attorney general's office to head the Justice Department's investigative agency in 1924, it was known as the division of investigation. It did not become a bureau until several years later — under Hoover.

HOOVER WAS tapped to head the division primarily because of his integrity. An odor of corruption had surrounded it when it was headed by William J. Burns, the famous private detective, under Atty. Gen. Harry M. Daugherty in the Harding administration. There were charges that its agents spent their time snooping on members of Congress to dig up details of their personal lives that would keep them from opposing the administration. (Columnist Jack Anderson made similar charges of FBI snooping before a House committee on Monday, just the day before Hoover died.)

President Calvin Coolidge, wishing to dispell the hints of scandal in his predecessor's administration, tabbed Harlan Fiske Stone (later Supreme Court Chief justice) to be his attorney general. He told Stone to find someone of unquestioned probity to head the investigative arm. Stone found the man in his own department.

LITTLE KNOWN to most Americans — who cannot remember when Hoover was not chief of the FBI — is an earlier chapter in his life which led him to attention within the Justice Department.

Following World War I, President Woodrow Wilson's attorney general, A. Mitchell Palmer, staged a great cleanup of "Reds." Thousands of aliens were arrested. One lot of 248 was shipped to Russia aboard the old Army transport Buford, without a chance of appeal. And the job of preparing a case against thousands of others, calling for deportation on the basis that as members of the Communist Party they had plotted violent overthrow of the U.S. government, was given to a junior attorney in Palmer's office: John Edgar Hoover.

The case failed when Judge George Anderson of U.S. District Court in Boston ruled that the government had failed to prove that Communist party membership constituted conspiracy to overthrow the government. The "big Red scare" died out — for awhile. But Hoover's role in it marked him for future attention.

HE IS GONE now. The FBI will continue, but it won't be the same. J. Edgar Hoover had become an institution, like radio or the movies (he long antedated television). He shared authority with no one. In the popular mind, he was the FBI.

It won't be that way any more.

Mobile Marinites

In common with most Californians, Marinites, as a rule, are quite well-travelled. By auto, by bus and by plane, we like to go to other places, other states, other countries, and experience new things.

But sometimes we wonder. Is the ability to go great distances and see so many things in a few weeks really so wonderful? We cram our senses and everything becomes a mental hash. Gradually, we become unsettled mental gypsies. We travel thousands of miles and ignore the beauty in our neighbor's garden.

IRS Destroys Its Image Of Friendliness And Help

By EARL G. WATERS

The image of the "friendly" state and federal income tax agencies was thrown the length of the field the other day, at least among those who contribute to retirement plans.

It has been their claim that they will be just as quick to point out all deductions to which a taxpayer is entitled as anyone else. Their only interest, they say, is collecting that which is owed. These claims now appear to be hollow.

The discovery that tax agencies are not sincerely interested in protecting the taxpayer from overpayments came abruptly with the last-minute revelation of a 1969 Internal Revenue ruling. Under this decision it seems that millions of wage earners throughout the nation have been paying taxes which they should not have paid.

These are the payments upon that portion of their salaries withheld for retirement plans.

THE RULING was to the effect that one cannot be taxed on "deferred income." This is the money which is deducted from wages and set apart for purposes over which the employee has no control. The money is not available to him until a later date. At such time it would be taxable.

Those in retirement programs have no options as to the money. It is deducted by mandate and held in reserve for his future retirement. It is invested and the earnings accrue to the credit of the fund, not the individual.

The employee is deprived of the use of the money for as long as 40 or 50 years. He cannot borrow upon it. If he quits or dies he , or his estate, will get the money. If he retires he will eventually draw the money only if he lives long enough, otherwise neither he nor his estate will benefit.

IT IS ON SUCH basis that the Rule 69.650 was made. But the "friendly" IRS not only failed to advise taxpayers back in 1969, but is now claiming it is not applicable. It contends the rule only applied to an individual case, one not involving retirement funds, and is preparing to fight lawsuits which have been instituted.

The fact is that had the public been advised of the ruling in 1969, those affected could have claimed federal refunds for each year commencing with 1965. As it was, the last-minute finding of the rule by some IRS employees who unofficially got the word out to their association members was almost too late to file protective claims for 1969.

And regardless of the federal agency, one wonders about the state tax agency. For, if the shoe fits the federal foot it also should be worn by the state. And the state can make its own rules.

Yet instead of aiding taxpayers with such a legitimate benefit, Martin Huff, executive officer of the Franchise Tax Board, took the other tack. He said he thought filing for refunds was a waste of time. In other words, he doesn't think the claims should be allowed.

"Where was all this crowd when we had the Washington Senators?"

"Buck up, Uncle. . . Another mile. . ."

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

No Anti-Marriage Scheme By Unitarians

Concerning Mr. Kulka's letter (April 28) stating that the Marin Fellowship of Unitarians "has an ambitious program of phasing out marriages, leaving untold pain and misery in the wake of its egregious success," I wish to declare as a happily married member of that organization that the fellowship has no such program. My experience, contrary to Mr. Kulka's statement, has been that my marriage has been strengthened as a result of the accepting atmosphere in which I have been encouraged to develop more open and honest relationships with my wife and my friends, indeed with all human beings, as a part of examining the meaning and value of life on earth. I feel sorry for any person who is hurt by this process, but that sometimes is a byproduct of relieving one's own hurt by becoming aware of who one really is and what one wants as a whole person.

As a member of the governing board of the fellowship, however, I am most concerned about the extremely poor judgement exercized by the ditors in deciding to print all of the letter's contents. To print a letter libeling a religious organization immediately after a printed policy which "reserves the right . . . to reject any (letter) that may be libelous and in bad taste" seems to me is the height of irresponsibile journalism. I strongly deplore and find reprehensible the laxity on the part of the editors and urge them to be more careful in the future for their own sake, as well as that of their correspondents.

Arrigoni's Record On Water Problem

About a year ago a group of Marin County citizens, concerned about water supply and sewage disposal problems of the county as a whole, initiated action to bring about joint handling of these related problems. They concluded that leadership of the board of supervisors was the first essential.

Peter Arrigoni was the first of the hembers of the board to join in this effort and, without wishing to detract from Mrs. Boxer's zeal regarding the defeat of the Marin-Sonoma aqueduct proposition, I cannot let it pass that had it not been for Peter Arrigoni's efforts there might not even have been a chance for Marin County voters to vote on the proposition.

What occurred — of basic importance — was the opposition of the board of supervisors to Assembly bills 2422 and 2423, which, if passed in their original form, would have permitted the water districts of Marin and Sonoma counties to contract for the aqueduct without approval by the citizens. Peter Arrigoni initiated the opposition to these bills and support of the board was given only after amendments were made requiring approval of the voters to any proposals of the water districts for funding of water supply arrangements. Arrigoni was also, of course, in the forefront of those opposing the aqueduct at the polls.

Supervisor Arrigoni has since then followed up on the joint water supply-sewage disposal plan by initiating the board resolutions to implement this program, which hopefully will result in better utilization of our water supply; better sewage disposal facilities; and more efficient operation of these functions on a county wide basis . . .

Water District Could Refuse Connections

At the town meeting conducted by the Marin Municipal Water District April 27 at Tamalpais High School, much emphasis was concentrated on an imminent (using rainfall estimates for the 1972 summer and fall) water shortage for Marin.

The MMWD also pointed with great pride to the fact the district has been operating solely on water rates although it does have the power to levy taxes. This, in other terms, means the consumer — not the land owner — is supporting the water district. It could be concluded, therefore, that the current consumer and its water district have little or no responsibility to those interests (potential land development) who have contributed nothing to the water department but have heretofore enjoyed the privileges of potential water use and incidental open space and recreational use. . .

Expressions from the town meeting audience encouraged the water district to refuse any more connections in an effort to control growth. Marin County Planning Commissioner Margaret Azevedo agreed with water district board members in their statement they could not refuse connections on the basis of growth because planning is not their responsibility.

I would like to point out, however, a major responsibility of the MMWD is protection of the present consumer.

Section 350 of Chapter 3 of the current State Water Code reads: "The governing body of a distributor of a public water supply. . .may declare a water shortage emergency condition to prevail within the area served by such distributor whenever it finds and determines that the ordinary demands and requirements of water consumers cannot be satisfied without depleting the water supply of the distributor to the extent that there would be insufficient water for human consumption, sanitation and fire protection."

Since our MMWD is prophesying an inadequate supply of water and has studied and prepared estimates of cost, yield and environmental impact of ten alternatives, I would also like to point out the district does have the power to refuse connections as stated in Section 356, Chapter 3 of the State Water Code: "The regulations and restrictions may include the right to deny applications for new or additional service connections . . ."

Nixon's Re-election May Have Profound Influence On Court

WASHINGTON — While it figures little, if at all, in the current political dialogue, one result of President Nixon's re-election would cast a long shadow on an inefinite future. In another four years Mr. Nixon would in all probability remake the Supreme Court of the United States in — if he holds to his belief in "strict constructionists" — his own image.

That he could carry Congress for his party in the event of his re-election in November is unlikely. By naming five or six justices to the high court, he would dominate the third coordinate and independent branch of government. Already four Nixon Judges, led by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, sit on the court.

Three "liberal" members out of the past survive. Given age and infirmity, one or more is likely to be replaced in the coming four years. That would mean an outright Nixon majority.

INCREASINGLY, the "liberal" judges are in dissent and the court is moving in a more conservative direction. From within the court come unhappy rumblings about the new order. The chief justice is said to want to make the highest tribunal a personal court.

Cited as evidence of this is his insistence when he is in the minority on assigning in conference the justice who will write the majority opinion. Traditionally over the years, when the chief is with the dissenters, the senior judge with the majority assigns the opinion writer. This may seem a small matter, but it touches prerogatives of independence long part of court tradition.

An incident causing concern within the court seems to link the chief justice with President Nixon's view that Congress can limit the scope of the courts in judicial review. Thecourt denied a hearing to the D.C. Federation of Civic Associations over the Three Sisters Bridge across the Potomac River, long opposed by activist citizen groups. Chief Justice Burger, joining in the denial, in a concurring opinion wrote the following conclusion:

"In these circumstances (Congress having approved the bridge) Congress may, of course, take any further legislative action it deems necessary to make unmistakably clear its intentions with respect to the Three Sisters project, even to the point of limiting or prohibiting judicial review of its directives."

This was taken by some within the court as paralleling President Nixon's message that called on the courts to hold off judgment on using busing as an instrument of integration. Critics were deeply disturbed that he seemed to restrict the rights and duties of federal courts.

All this may, of course, be no more than the troubles of a shakedown cruise. Burger was named chief justice in June of 1969 and it can be argued that he has hardly had time to shape up a new court. The disaster of the President's nomination of G. Harrold Carswell to the court and the subsequent release of a White House list of possible nominees that include Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia was hardly a steadying influence on an ancient institution rocked by the controversy over Abe Fortas.

Yet both admirers and critics of the now retired chief justice, Earl Warren, recollect the way in which he pulled the court together after his appointment by President Eisenhower in 1953. Warren's deep conviction was the need to reactivate the amendments in the Bill of Rights adopted after the Civil War as they related to justice for the minority race. He had been chief less than a year when a unanimous court declared unconstitutional the long-standing doctrine of "separate but equal" in the public schools. Warren won the hatred of many, particularly in the South where "Impeach Earl Warren" billboards sprang up along the highways.

He has divorced himself entirely from the court, spending a great deal of his time in seminars in law schools across the country. In the dedicatory address of the Seeley G. Mudd Law Building at Washington University in St. Louis, he noted the growing trend toward suppression of Civil rights and human liberties!

"The right of the press to publish is being attacked; the rights of association and of dissent are being questioned; detention without a warrant is being advocated; the rights of privacy in the home and in communications are being disregarded; the right against self-incrimination is being restricted; and the words 'due process of law' and 'equal protection of the law' for millions of minority citizens are in jeopardy."

That is a warning flag raised by one who has been through the wars and has emerged with a serene and courageous spirit.

Splintering Democratic Party Faces Stalemate At Miami

The processes by which Americans nomiate their presidents are highly imperfect.

We are now struggling through the primaries. The Democrats are looking forward to their nominating convention in Miami with fear and trembling. They remember the shambles of Chicago in 1968, which helped defeat them in November, and they would like to avoid a repetition.

As things now appear, Senators Humphrey and McGovern will go to Miami with the largest groups of delegates. Governor Wallace will have a sizeable parcel, probably under tidy control.

NOBODY WILL have a majority in advance, unless some big surprises are ahead. What has happended in the primaries thus far is that the extremist candidates have greatly weakened the center. Nobody has had a chance to build up a unifying, pacifying middle-ground majority.

The inroads made by Governor Wallace and Senator McGovern, and the solid organized labor support held by Senator Humphrey, have temporarily taken Senator Muskie out of the race. That is the trouble with candidates on the extremes. They destroy the center.

From now on, Senator Humphrey has a better chance to widen his centrist support. He may benefit more than anybody else by Senator Muskie's release of his delegates.

But Senator McGovern is coming along strong. The same discontents which produce the Wallace vote may turn to some extent to him. They did so in Massachusetts. And Senator McGovern announces his intention of forming "a new center." He may well do so.

Thus the outlook for Miami, at the outset, is of two pretty strong rival groups, with supporters who will be reluctant to switch. Organized labor and old-time party leaders are deeply committed to Senator Humphrey just as they were at Chicago four years ago. Senator McGovern's followers are most zelaous of all. They will not easily switch. The battles to create a majority could be very gory. They were in 1968.

AND SO THE CHANCE of stalemate looms. That brings Senator Muskie back into the picture as man who withdrew from the heat of the battle with grace, somewhat scarred, but available as a compromise candidate.

Over his shoulder, however, looming higher than anybody else, is Senator Kennedy. As things look now, the only way Senator Kennedy could avoid a draft would be to throw his considerable support behind one of the other candidates in time.

The beneficiary would presumably be Senator McGovern, for whom one of Robert Kennedy's daughters is already working.

It would be a natural alliance. The only trouble is that if Senator McGovern became a successful president, his re-election in 1976 would be a possiblity, and Senator Kennedy's hopes would be put off an additional four years.

The alternative to all this clumsy process is twofold: a nationwide primary, held in all states the same day; and a tightening of party loyalties, leadership, and appeal, so that minority factions would no longer destroy party cohesion.

THAT EMPHASIZES the importance of creating a more effective party coalition than now exists among the Democrats. The Republicans are perhaps a little more united, since they have driven out some of their liberals, but they are more than ever a national minority.

The opposition party today has a great opportunity to build a majority based on the manifest discontents of the American people.

The trouble is that none of the candidates, thus far, has effectively drawn together these discontents. And Richard Nixon remains a strong and decisive president, using the power of his office to the utmost.

Property Rights Being Violated In Name Of 'Conservation'

Many conservationists and advocates of preserving open space are undoubtedly sincere, fair-minded persons interested in saving some of our countries natural beauties for future generations to appreciate and enjoy.

Many are surely people who recognize the fact that open space — particularly in urbanized areas — will cost money to acquire. They are willing to pay the price, either through bond issues, assessment districts or other means.

The frustration and anger the environmentalist feels as he looks across the neon-studded, gray-paved landscape, pocked by ugly and poorly planned development, is understandable. How many of us traveling from a spot like West Marin or Samuel Taylor Park to, for example, Francisco Boulevard in San Rafael, have not recoiled at the spectacle of what man can do to nature with some concrete, neon and sticks of wood? It's a very natural feeling.

MANY PEOPLE who work diligently to preserve the natural beauty of the country should be commended for their laudable actions; future Americans will thank them.

But there are others in the open space movement who pose a threat to the individual rights of all of us, so-called conservationists who would offer us a park here or a recreation area there in exchange for our basic rights as Americans.

These are the people who demand that this or that piece of property be snatched from its rightful owners to be preserved "in the public interest." These are the individuals who demand that certain land be "saved" from development even if it has to be stolen from the people who paid for it and own it.

property he wants for open space and doesn't care about how it will be paid for; he just wants it and thinks that should be enough to satisfy anyone.

OMINOUSLY ENOUGH, public officials — in Marin as well as elsewhere — are heeding what this type of individual says, perhaps afraid to be branded "anti-ecology" or "anti-open space."

Developers and large landowners may have ruined much of the country in the past and for this they deserve blame. But does anyone, no matter how much he deplores their actions, also believe that all property rights should be abolished? If developers lose their rights to hold their private property and be paid for it if it is taken away for any reason, what about the rest of us?

How would the homeowner like it if a group of people came into his house and ordered him to move out and not use the residence he has purchased because his neighbors had decided it should become a public theater "for the good of the public, in the public interest?" Isn't that individual homeowner part of the public too?

TWO RECENT CASES in Sausalito must be disturbing to anyone who values the few rights he has left, even if he is the most fervent conservationist around.

Last month the Sausalito City Council, at the urging of "conservationists," declared a year's moratorium on development of 160 acres of land on Wolfback Ridge with the vague idea the city might at some future date, present a bond issue (which may or may not pass) to purchase the land. As a result, one of the owners of the property (who has been trying to develop it in orderly fashion — in whatever way the city wants — for two years) may lose the land because of the year's delay.

How Kissinger Made Visit To Moon For The President

WASHINGTON — The White House announced today that Henry Kissinger has just returned from a secret trip to the moon. Ron Ziegler said that Kissinger was the fourth crewman on Apollo 16 and spent 20 hours exploring the moon for President Nixon, who plans to go there just before Election Day.

How Kissinger managed to pull it off is one of the best news stories of our time. The White House has announced that Mr. Kissinger was going to Hollywood to attend the 1972 presentation of the Academy Awards.

When he did not show up at the awards, the Western White House at San Clemente said he had a cold and was being nursed back to health at the home of Tuesday Weld.

A check at Tuesday Weld's house revealed that Kissinger had left on Wednesday with his girl, Friday, but no one knew where he had gone.

A RUMOR STARTED by the CIA indicated that Kissinger had returned to Peking to pick up his dry cleaning. But Chou En-lai's press secretary said he hadn't seen Kissinger in weeks, and if he was in Peking the Chinese didn't know about it.

The White House correspondents started pressing Ziegler as to Kissinger's whereabouts. Ziegler said with a straight face, "He went to Moscow to talk to the people in the Kremlin about President Nixon's trip."

This sounded logical, but when the Washington newspaper, magazine and TV people checked with their Moscow correspondents, they hit a stone wall.

A press secretary for Brezhnev said no one had seen Kissinger in Moscow and, as far as the Russians knew, he hadn't been to Leningrad or Kiev, either.

Now angry, the White House correspondents attacked Ziegler for lying to them.

Ziegler said he had made a mistake and that Kissinger was really in Paris holding secret talks with the North Vietnamese delegation.

WHILE THE AMERICAN press was being led on the wild goose chase, Kissinger was down on Cape Kennedy dressed in white coveralls, disguised as one of the workers who would help the astronauts into Apollo 16. At the last minute, just before the hatch was closed, Kissinger jumped into the capsule and said: "I am on a secret mission for the President. Let's get out of here."

The astronauts, who hadn't been in on the plan, protested that there wasn't enough food for four men on the space journey.

"Don't worry," Kissinger said, holding up a bottle of orange juice. "I brought my own 'Tang.'"

While they were hurtling toward the moon, Kissinger briefed the astronauts on what they were to do. He told them to go about their business on the moon as if nothing had happened; under no condition were they to focus their TV cameras on him, and while they were picking up rocks and going through the motions of setting up scientific experiments, he would make arrangements for the President's visit to the moon.

The astronauts played their parts perfectly, and there wasn't one person watching TV who suspected that Kissinger was on the moon at the same time as the Apollo 16 mission.

THE ONLY TIME the secret was endangered was when Kissinger tripped over a wire on the moon and messed up a million-dollar experiment. Fortunately all space suits look alike, and everybody thought it was astronaut John Young who goofed.

On the way back, Kissinger splashed down first by parachute into Key Biscayne and was picked up out of the water by Bebe Rebozo.

It was only after Kissinger made a full report to the President that Ziegler admitted to Henry's true whereabouts for the past 10 days. Thanks to one of the best kept secrets of the decade, Ziegler confirmed that the President would be able to go to the moon this fall as scheduled.

Music Education Stress Recommended At Reed

The Reed School District board has received a report that recommended that musical education — currently an education "frill" in the district — receive greater emphasis in the curriculum for all students from kindergarten through 8th grade.

The report was the product of a one-year study by a volunteer music education committee. It was presented to the board Tuesday night by Supt. Ralph Giovanniello, on behalf of the committee and the district's music staff.

It recommended that music education — including singing lessons and musical instrument instructions — become a vital part of every student's education.

The first phase of the program would begin in September, when all fourth graders will be introduced to the music of the recorder, a simply-designed wooden flute.

According to board member Margaret Jones, the district hopes to create a program that would teach all fourth graders about the recorder. The board, she said, was not interested in teaching fourth graders a different instrument each year.

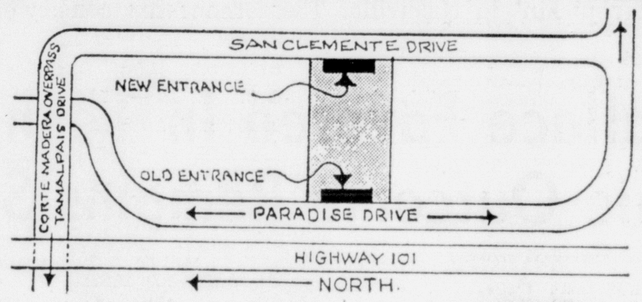

After receiving the report, the board approved the general concept of increasing the district's emphasis on musical education, but delayed formal approval of the preliminary report until more detailed information is provided.

The Reed Union School District Board also:

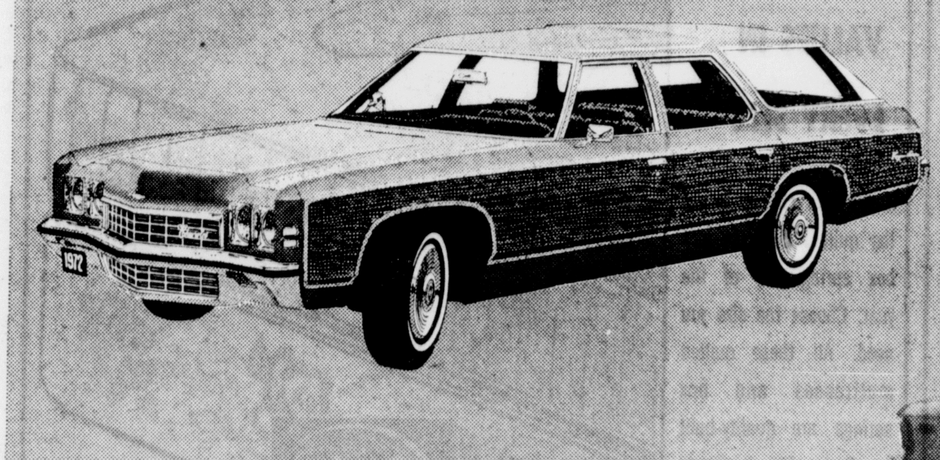

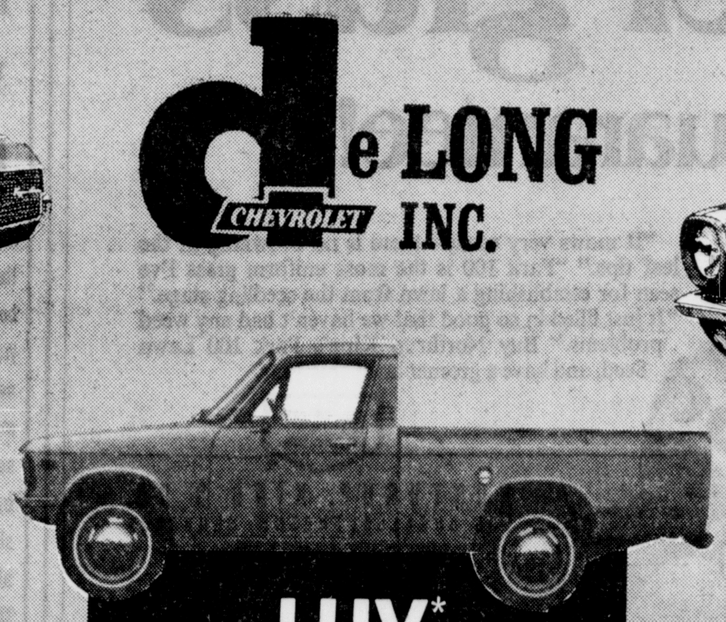

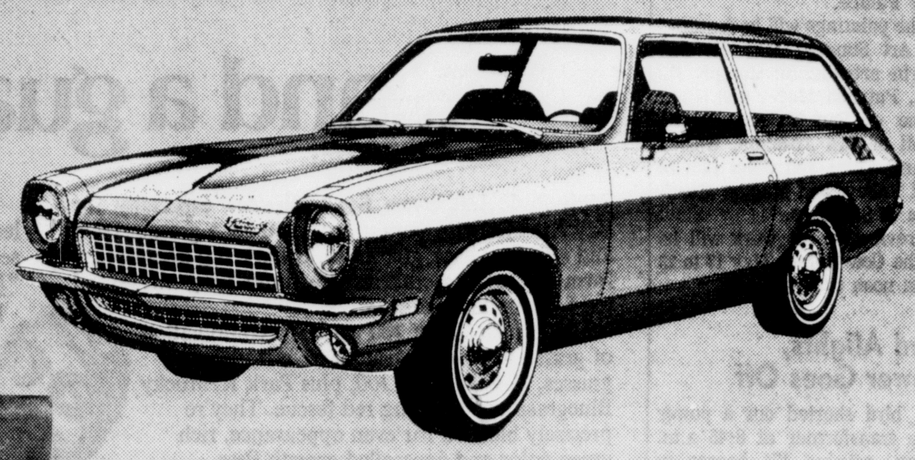

TENNIS COURTS — Authorized the superintendent to negotiate with the City of Tiburon a joint-powers agreement for construction of two public tennis courts at the Del Mar School.

EMERGENCY — Endorsed the countywide Marin Operational Emergency Plan for dealing with disasters in the county.

Wallace Favored In Tennessee; Ohio Outcome Remains Snarled

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace says an overwhelming victory for him today in the Tennessee primary should commit the state's 49 delegates to stick with him beyond the first ballot at the Democratic national convention. In Ohio, the chaotic presidential primary might not be unsnarled for days.

"The people of Tennessee are not going to like it if they vote for Wallace and the delegates don't go for him," Wallace said after being greeted by lusty rebel yells when he wound up his Tennessee campaign in Nashville Wednesday night.

Because of his frequent appearances and antibusing position — 50,000 of Nashville's 90,000 school children are bused under federal court order — Wallace was expected to post his first primary victory since Florida by outrunning 10 other Democrats, most of whom never campaigned in Tennessee.

In Ohio, the U.S. District Court was hearing petitions that could result in a special election in Cuyahoga County (Cleveland) to unsnarl the race between Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey and George S. McGovern.

Humphrey, winning 41 per cent of the Democratic votes counted so far, held a 2 per cent lead over McGovern. The difference hinges on populous Cuyahoga County, consisting of Cleveland and its suburbs.

Delays caused by locked and undelivered voting machines prevented an undetermined number of persons from voting in Tuesday's primary.

Judge Frank J. Battista was hearing a suit today asking that returns be restrained until federal marshals count the Cuyahoga votes. Another suit asked for the ballots to be nullified and a special election called.

At stake were one-third of Ohio's 153 delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Buoyed by his lead in Ohio and a victory in Indiana Tuesday, Humphrey pushed on to West Virginia, where his 1960 bid for the Democratic presidential nomination ran aground on a victory by John F. Kennedy.

Humphrey in Charleston, W. Va., predicted a victory in next Tuesday's primary, but acknowledged that Wallace would make a strong showing.

Attacking Nixon's economic policies, Humphrey said high unemployment and low income were the issues in West Virginia. "This state is a living example of what happens when a President doesn't tend to the problem."

In Washington, President A.F. Grospiron of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union endorsed McGovern for speaking "plainly, directly and favorably to the issues affecting and concerning working people."

Art Donated To KQED Auction

Seven Marin artists have donated works to be sold to benefit television station KQED during the station's annual auction from May 26 to June 4 at the Cow Palace.

The paintings will be featured on Art Sunday, May 28. The Marin artists are: Joseph Jaqua, Patricia Meyer and Gwen Stone of San Rafael, Dennis Beall of San Anselmo, Wesley Chamberlain and John Ihle of Mill Valley, and Maggie Merriman of Sausalito.

Preview of the work will be at the Cow Palace May 17 to 23 from noon to seven p.m.

Bird Alights, Power Goes Off

A bird shorted out a power pole transformer at 8:45 a.m. today, causing 174 houses in Kentfield to lose their electricity for about an hour, according to a company official.

R. G. Young, superintendant of electric operations for the company's north bay region, said the bird apparently landed between the conductor and transformer case, causing an explosion.

Clean Air Blueprint Reject Seen

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A controversial blueprint to clean up air pollution in California will be rejected by the federal government which then will impose its own controls, a top state smog official said yesterday.

George J. Taylor, chief for air sanitation with the Air Resources Board, said the "implementation plan" submitted by the board in December to the federal Environmental Protection Agency will be turned down because it does not provide for compliance with federal air quality standards by 1975.

Taylor told Bay Area Air Pollution Control District directors that one of the failures of the plan was that the Bay Area district has filed to meet this past Monday's deadline to adopt a permit system to regulate construction which could worsen air pollution.

The district board will hold a hearing on its proposed permit system at 9:30 a.m. on May 19 in Room 1194 of the State Building, 455 Golden Gate Avenue. Local government officials already have protested that the permit system will interfere with their powers.

The Bay Area district lost eight months of progress on its proposed permit system when it failed to heed an opinion last year by its attorney, Matthew S. Walker, that the district had adequate legal power to enforce such a system. District directors began to act on the system only after Walker's opinion was confirmed eight months later by the attorney general's office.

Despite federal rejection of the statewide plan as a whole, Taylor said, the Bay Area district's portion of the statewide plan was "satiffactory." The government will rule on the plan by the end of this month, he said.

Taylor declined to speculate what sort of regulations the government would impose on the state and Bay Area.

Bad Check Hearing Scheduled Tuesday

A preliminary hearing for David Wade Cameron, of Novato, on four felony counts of writing bad checks has been scheduled for Tuesday in Marin Municipal Court.

Cameron, who has pleaded innocent, is charged with writing four checks worth $300 on the account of Vivian Brogdon between June and September. The checks reportedly were stolen.

Air Monitoring Criticism Rebutted

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Criticism that air pollution in the Bay Area is far worse than reported by smog officials was rebutted yesterday by one of the officials as "grossly incorrect and unjust," irrelevant, misleading and moot.

The criticism, which indicated that the district was not meeting state and federal anti-pollution standards, came last month from Dr. David T. Mage, an assistant professor of chemical engineering at San Jose State College.

Mage said the district's air quality monitoring equipment was too far from many heavily polluted areas, too high above ground, incorrectly calibrated and inaccurate.

Defending the district was its director of technical services, Milton Feldstein.

What Mage overlooked, he said, was that state and federal air quality standards are based on existing instruments and measuring practices. Thus, whether the instruments are accurate is moot, Feldstein said, because "the standard is tied to the instrument, whatever its inherent deficiencies."

As for Mage's objection that the instruments fail to record peak pollution levels, Feldstein declared that only "continued, long-term exposure to concentrations of contaminants" affected health, thus it made no difference that peaks were not measured.

Feldstein acknowledged the validity of Mage's suggestion that the district double its network of air quality monitoring stations, but noted this would cost $400,000 in capital outlay plus $125,000 a year more for personnel, rents and supplies.

He also acknowledged the validity of Mage's complaint that existing stations could be better located to sample air more representative of the quality breathed by most persons in the region, but said that suitable buildings often were impossible to find in ideal sites.

Mage's remark that instrument deficiencies are one reason district regulations have not been enforced was branded "grossly incorrect and unjust" by Feldstein. "Many violations have been issued, plant modifications made, all based on data from present monitors," he said.

His rebuttal of Mage's criticism was not discussed at yesterday's meeting of district directors, although each board member received a copy. Mage reportedly is preparing a counter rebuttal.

Bay Air Polluters Asking Exemption

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Air polluters seeking exemptions from smog controls will be charged filing fees for the first time.

Bay Area Air Pollution Control District officials estimate that each application for a variance costs about $1,000 in staff time to process, a cost district taxpayers have paid for the past 17 years.

A long campaign by citizen groups to end the "free ride" for industry ended yesterday with a 13-2 vote by district directors to charge a base fee of $500 for each application, plus $100 for each emission point and plus $250 for each additional half-day of hearings required after the first day before the district's hearing board.

The split vote was on a motion by director William R. Jelavich of Mountain View. Marin County Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., who arrived just before the balloting, abstained from the vote.

Air Pollution Control District Directors Also:

CROSSING — Unanimously urged a "no" vote against Measure A on the June ballot in the Bay Area, which would permit construction of the Southern Crossing Bridge from Alameda to San Francisco.

ENVIRONMENT — Unanimously urged a "no" vote against Proposition 9 on the June ballot, the Environment Initiative.

POLLUTION — Received a staff report that eight companies have been ordered to install instruments in smokestacks suspected of violating district regulations. The eight are: Shell, Humble, Standard and Union oil companies; Allied, Monsanto and Stauffer chemical companies, and Phillips Petroleum Co.

VIOLATIONS — Received a staff report that notices of violating district regulations were issued during the past month in San Rafael against the Basalt Rock Co., the Emporium and the McNear Co. In Sonoma County, violation notices were issued against Marino Crinella and the Elm Court Motel in Petaluma and against R. Dernbach of Cotati.

PUBLIC — Adopted a policy that any member of the public failing to request time on the agenda to speak one week before board meetings must wait until the end of the agenda.

Students Start Fast For Peace

OAKLAND (UPI)—About 150 Mills College students were in the midst of a weeklong fast for peace Wednesday, donating their uneaten meals to the Oakland Switchboard, an aid organization.

The fasting students represented about one sixth of the student body of the exclusive women's college, a spokesman said.

The fast was to be climaxed Thursday night with a "peace awakening" in the Mills Greek Theater with the Rev. Cecil Williams of Glide Memorial Methodist Church in San Francisco, a midnight peace convention in the college chapel, a 1 a.m. candlelight walk, and a closing breakfast for peace at 7 a.m. Friday.

Angela Placed At Civic Center Day Before Tragedy

By MARY LEYDECKER

SAN JOSE — As the prosecution nears the end of its case against Angela Davis, the next-to-last nails in a house built entirely of circumstantial evidence are witnesses telling her whereabouts the week before the Marin shoot-out.

Today a witness placed her at the Marin Civic Center the day before the Aug. 7, 1970 gun battle.

The finishing touches will be testimony about her activities from the day of the tragedy in which Judge Harold J. Haley and three others died to the time of October 1970 when she was arrested in New York City.

The state contends that Miss Davis helped plan a conspiracy aimed at freeing Soledad Brother George Jackson from San Quentin and that she gave four guns to his younger brother, Jonathan, who initiated and died in the shoot-out.

Her motive was love for Jackson, a convict who died a year later in a San Quentin escape attempt, the state claims.

To prove its case, the state is attempting to show that Miss Davis was young Jackson's constant companion in the days before the shoot-out and had to have been in on the plot.

"MICKEY" MAJORS
Lent her car

To this end, witnesses have testified about these dates:

Sunday, Aug. 2, 1970 — Miss Davis took a plane from Los Angeles to San Francisco. Jonathan Jackson attended a Soledad Brothers Defense Committee open house in San Francisco.

Tuesday, Aug. 4, 1970 — Young Jackson borrowed a car from a woman in San Jose which she did not get back until weeks after the shoot-out when it was found at the San Francisco International Airport. Miss Davis and Jonathan went to San Quentin where the 17-year-old youth visited his brother while she waited for him.

Wednesday, Aug. 4, 1970 — Miss Davis and Jonathan again went to San Quentin. Miss Davis had to stay in a waiting room but she waved at George Jackson and he waved back.

Thursday, Aug. 5, 1970 — Miss Davis bought a shotgun and ammunition at the Eagle Loan Office, a pawn shop in San Francisco. She was accompanied by a young Negro man. The gun bore the same serial number as the one which, with its barrel and butt sawed off, was taped to Judge Haley's neck and caused his death.

Friday, Aug. 6, 1970 — Miss Davis accompanied young Jackson to the Civic Center in a yellow van which developed battery trouble.

FRANK BLUMENTHAL
Sold a gun

Today, Alden Fleming, owner of a service station across the street from the Civic Center, came down from the witness stand, stood three feet away from Miss Davis, pointed his forefinger at her and said: "This lady here."

He was answering a request from prosecutor Albert W. Harris, Jr. to look around the courtroom and tell him if he saw the woman "who was in your service station with the man you have identified as Jonathan Jackson on Aug. 6, 1970."

Fleming said the man and woman came to his service station because they could not get their van started, and his son, Peter went with them to the Civic Center parking lot to start the vehicle.

Harris still hopes to introduce into evidence a telephone conversation between Miss Davis and San Jose attorney John Thorne on Aug. 5 in which she reportedly told him she was in San Jose that evening and that she and young Jackson were on their way to Santa Cruz "to pick up some things."

The prosecution also contends that the plot was to have been put into action on Aug. 6, but that young Jackson arrived at the Hall of Justice after the trial of convict James McClain (killed in the shoot-out) had already recessed for the day.

Many witnesses have described, in varying details, the events of the next fateful day when young Jackson entered the courtroom pulled out a gun and started the taking of hostages.

Some have said that McClain, a prisoner in the same unit at San Quentin as George Jackson, said, "Where is the tape?" to Jonathan, indicating the convict knew of the plot.

Yesterday, a pale, blonde and seemingly frightened young woman testified about how she lent her car to Jonathan Jackson and didn't get it back until Mrs. Jackson told her where it was.

(Harris apparently does not intend to call Georgia Jackson, mother of the slain pair, as he originally had intended, to the stand.)

Instead, yesterday he put on two employees of the pawn shop where the 12-gauge Spanish shotgun was purchased. Miss Davis had asked for "something cheap," Frank Blumenthal testified, and so he sold her a $35 gun.

He said he recognized her as did longtime clerk, David Lifson, who asked for and got her autograph. He later lost it, he said, but he was offered another during cross-examination by one of Miss Davis's lawyers, Leo Branton.

Lifson, a talkative, joking man, brought laughter to the courtroom when he said he recognized the former college instructor because "she had been plastered all over the papers."

In addition to the San Quentin guards who placed Miss Davis at the prison twice during the days before the shoot-out, a surprise witness yesterday said she had also seen her there with a young man.

Madeline Lucas, a Vacaville resident who formerly lived in San Diego, recognized her, she said, because of the many times she had watched her on television.

She had said to her mother, who was with her, that they had just passed Angela Davis, and she later told her husband but she never went to authorities because "I didn't think my testimony was important."

Apparently it was her husband, described as an avid news follower, who last week called officials to tell what his wife had seen.

Anonymous Telegram Enters Firing Try

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN FRANCISCO — An anonymous telegram and a new personnel dispute added yesterday to the continuing controversy surrounding the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District's top administrator, D. J. Callaghan.

The telegram figured briefly in Callaghan's unsuccessful move to have the attorney, Matthew S. Walker, fired by District directors.

The new personnel dispute involved a move by Callaghan to demote the board of directors' clerk, Mabel Harder. Former Sausalito City Councilman Wyman Hicks, acting chairman of the board, refused to disclose details of the dispute, but the Independent-Journal obtained a copy of Miss Harder's complaining letter to the directors.

She appealed to the directors to order Callaghan to comply with the directors' resolution that no "major personnel action or change" be made pending completion of a management survey of the district.

Callaghan was linked to the telegram by Elizabeth Segal, a reporter for her husband Freedom News of Richmond. Callaghan denied "having anything to do with a telegram of that type."

The telegram, sent to the board at its February meeting in Santa Rosa, accused Walker of conflict of interest, a charge that failed to stick after review by the district board.

The true identity of the sender of the telegram, signed "Barry Hastings," never was determined.

Mrs. Segal, who spent weeks digging into the identity of its sender, told district directors yesterday that Western Union records showed that the telephone number and address of the sender belonged to Peter Speros, a San Francisco businessman and close friend of Callaghan.

Mrs. Segal said that Speros at first said he had nothing to do with the telegram, but later refused to sign a statement to that effect. She said that the Western Union Clerk who took the telegram in person from its sender described "a man who didn't look anything like Mr. Speros."

Callaghan later confirmed his friendship with Speros.

She said that she showed the clerk pictures of other persons, but that the clerk was "unsure of the identity" of the sender.

"I leave this in your lap," Mrs. Segal told district directors, few of whom commented on her information.

Director Bernard T. Gerton of Pleasanton, who chaired a committee that had recommended Walker's firing, objected to Mrs. Segal's presentation. "We seem to be living in a day when people can accuse and that's the end of it."

The dispute involving Miss Harder, the board's secretary, apparently was the cause of note passing and whispering among several directors. One told the Independent-Journal that Callaghan, who already has hired a replacement to handle Miss Harder's duties for the directors, will be ordered to suspend such a change until after the management survey, due this summer.

Miss Harder has been in her present position for the past nine years and has been employed by the district for 13 years.

Filante Urges Pay Moratorium

A four-year moratorium on further salary increases for county supervisors was urged last night by Dr. William J. Filante, candidate for supervisor in the Second District.

Filante, speaking at a coffee at the Sleepy Hollow home of Birdie Schneider, said that unless supervisors "participate personally in economy and efficiency in government, it would be pure sham to expect the rest of the county departments to cut costs."

He also urged more thorough control of supervisors budget items such as "conference and convention" spending, which he said increased 53.5 per cent from 1968 to 1972. Supervisors now are paid $13,200 a year.

Gallerie's Variance Is Denied

The Sausalito Planning Commission last night denied a variance application by Terrence M. Flynn to legalize an additional 203 feet of floor area he has added to his Portal Galleries in the Village Fair, 777 Bridgeway.

Planning director H. Eric Borgwardt said Flynn had enlarged the gallery without city approval or a building permit and was now seeking city sanction for the action.

In other business, the commission set a special meeting for 8 p.m. next Thursday to consider a tentative map for a proposed 106-unit subdivision planned by developer Edward R. Fitzsimmons for 160 acres of land on Wolfback Ridge.

The commissioners also continued until their May 17 meeting consideration of a conditional use permit application from Franklin Anderson to expand and enlarge his retail nursery at Bridgeway and Bee Street.

Wreck Victims Still 'Serious'

Vincent A. LaBarbara, 37, and his wife Barbara, 35, today remained in serious condition in the intensive care unit at Marin General Hospital following a two-car collision yesterday in San Rafael.

Their car collided at 7:15 a.m. at Third Street and Lincoln Avenue witp another driven by John F. Besaw, 21, of 15A Stanley Street, Petaluma. Besaw and his brother Robert, a passenger, suffered scalp cuts and were to be released today from the hospital.

John Besaw was cited by San Rafael police for failure to stop for a red light, according to reports.

Bay Fire District Budget: $185,000

The Alto-Richardson Bay Fire District board has presented a preliminary budget of $185,000 for next year.

The total is $5,000 higher than its current budget.

According to Fire Chief Carol O. Heynen, the increase can be attributed to salary increases and reduced working hours, which required hiring of additional employees.

If the budget is approved in June, after a public hearing, there will be no increase in the district's current tax rate of 73.5 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, said Heynen.

The $185,000 budget includes approximately $150,000 for salaries and wages: $30,000 for maintenance and $5,000 to purchase a new ladder truck, radios and miscellaneous items.

The district also anticipates spending $45,000 from reserve funds it has accumulated over the past 10 years, said Heynen, to construct an addition to the existing fire station.

The addition will be built on one acre of land adjacent to the fire station that the district presently leases from the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary.

Original Prints To Be Displayed

A display of 22 original Currier and Ives prints will be shown at the Security Pacific National Bank, San Rafael, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. until May 15.

The collection, owned by the Travelers Insurance Co., depicts news events, customs, humor and costumes in America from 1835 to 1870.

The artists, Nathaniel Currier and James M. Ives, began their print-making in the 1830's.

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A Los Angeles industrial firm announced Tuesday it will act as a consultant for a $350 million urban development project in Teheran.

John B. Kilroy, president of Kilroy Industries, said his firm was selected by Teheran's mayor, Dr. Gholem Rez Nikpay.

Portion Of Pier Drops In Bay

A 500-square-foot portion of the Napa Street pier in Sausalito collapsed Tuesday and sank about five feet into the Bay.

Asst. Fire Chief Frank Christ said the break occurred about 11:30 a.m. under a shed approximately 100 feet out on the 1200-foot pier and was caused by "general deterioration" of the structure.

The pier, located at 1702 Bridgeway, has been branded unsafe by both the Sausalito City Council and its owner Edward Halperin who, on April 4, received permission from the city to reconstruct the pier.

Firemen stood by while Pacific Gas and Electric Co. workmen repaired wires damaged by the collapse.

McHarg is founder and chairman of the Department of Landscape Architecture and Regional Planning at the University of Pennsylvania.

The program is sponsored by the Marin Conservation League.

WEDDING

Gown Reveals Person

By DIANA LOERCHER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK — A woman makes a statement of identity in her choice of a wedding gown. While her daily wardrobe reflects her personality, there is usually enough variety of mood and intent among the individual pieces to make it difficult to single out one item that expresses her essence.

But the bridal dress, because of its singular importance, conveys a message. Through it the bride seems to say to her audience, and her future husband one of two things: "This is the kind of woman I think I am" or "This is the kind of woman I want to think I am."

FOR JUNE AND summer nuptials this year, the bride has several images to choose from — old, new, borrowed, and even blue. As is traditional, most of the gowns move back in time to an earlier period of history, but many also hark back to an earlier period in the woman's life, her girlhood.

Certainly there are still avalanches of lace and pearls tumbling down mountains of ivory satin, but these stately wonders are experiencing serious competition from collections such as Oscar de la Renta's for Bergdorf Goodman.

De la Renta's designs are reminiscent of Restoration and Victorian England, and even Puritan New England. All his gowns are milkmaid white, with a high neck, puff sleeves, ruffles, bibs, aprons, and capes that combine to give the bride a little-girl look of prim but winsome innocence. (Carrying this theme a bit further, Piccione offers a gown that resembles a nun's habit.)

There are softer, more romantic gowns in billowing chiffons and organzas with swooning ruffles. Topped by a floppy flowered hat, these fetching gowns evoke Gainsboro and the English tradition.

Franklin Simon's "barefoot ant style vies with fancier Edsions of these styles for the young iconoclast who can convert her mother. Antique "Victorian" and rustic "Americana" are the motifs of these inexpensively priced, diversely colored, and definitely informal "gowns." In gingham, eyelet cotton, unbleached muslin, and tapestry prints, pastoral peasant style view with fancier Edwardian concoctions for possession of the bride's imagination.

BUT REGARDLESS of category, all can easily be worn on other occasions, with or without bare feet, and all share what the store so aptly describes as "attic" quality.

Also in an unconventional vein are the gowns that pick up this year's fashion trends. De la Renta's kimono gown emanates mystery and exoticism, while the bride who wears the sporty sailor suggests a ship sailing into the matrimonial harbor.

Fidelity to "femininity" is still the order of the nuptial day, though there are occasional instances of tailored separates that seem oddly austere, considering the occasion.

©1972 The Christian Science Publishing Society

THE LITTLE-GIRL look in Swiss cotton eyelet is another creation of designer Oscar de la Renta. This season the bride has several images to choose from.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Woman Dresses For Her Man If She's A Smart Little Wife

DEAR SUE AND HELEN:

My mother, who is around 50, is trying to act like someone in her 20s, just because she's a size 10. She's bought boots, midis, a cape, and even cut her hair in a shag.

I think she looks weird, but my father thinks it's great. Next thing, he'll be wearing bells and skinny-ribbed shirts!

DEAR EMB:

What do you want, a mother hubbard for mom? Be glad she's young at heart — with a figure to match — just so she draws the line at hot pants.

Would you give up a style because another generation didn't like it? I'll bet she doesn't dictate what YOU wear — so pay her the same compliment. (She probably deserves one; the outfit you describe sounds great for older women.) — SUE

DEAR EMBARRASSED:

I have news for you, chickabiddy: A woman dresses to please her husband, not her children — if she's a smart little wife, that is.

And what's wrong with bells and skinny-ribbed shirts on middle-aged men whose "middles" haven't aged?

If you've still got it, sez I, flaunt it! A girl should be proud of parents who do. — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

Dale was the first boy I ever dated. We went steady a year and got engaged at 16. Then Ray persuaded me marriage with Dale would be very shaky, so we broke up and I started going with Ray. Also steady.

It didn't work. In six months I wanted to be free. But now I am worried. I can't stay true to any one guy — seems like I'm always seeking someone else.

I get tired of boys, and date different ones almost every week. It's like when I begin to get serious about one, another will ask me out and I think, Wow, how could I have thought I dug on him? I was never very popular before. Suddenly I am. I love being in demand, but I can't fall in love.

Kissing is as far as I go. Sometimes I don't enjoy it, sometimes I do. Helen and Sue, is my desire to go out with all these boys normal? — UNTRUE

DEAR UN:

It's normal — if you're having fun. You probably got tired of being tied down and now you want to check out all the possibilities before you settle for one. — SUE

DEAR UN:

. . . But don't let sudden popularity turn you into a scalp-hunter. You're smart not to fall in love at 16, but don't date a boy you can't even like. Better to stay home than spend an evening with a bore. — HELEN

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I'm 17, going with a guy of 23. He's just great but he won't go to my senior prom with me, even though I get the tickets. Says he doesn't like proms.

My friends tell me to persuade him by threatening to ask someone else if he won't take me. A fella at school would be my escort (we're just friends), but isn't that kind of — COLD-BLOODED

DEAR C.B.:

How many senior proms will you have in your life? Don't beg or threaten. Just go — with whichever guy wants to take you. Surely your older man will understand. — SUE

DEAR C.B.:

. . . Especially if you "understand" a 23-year-old's reluctance to attend a high school dance — and tell him you've found a way to get him off the hook. — HELEN

(Got a problem? Or a subject for discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel — or both, in care of the Independent-Journal, if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.)

New president of the Auxiliary to the Northern California Multiple Sclerosis Society is Mrs. James Munro Walker of San Rafael.

Mrs. Walker has been an auxiliary member for four years and served as its vice president last year. She explained that the group's purpose is to help eradicate the disease by raising funds for research, to provide service for patients and to educate the public about multiple sclerosis.

The auxiliary plans an enlarged home visiting program for patients, bi-monthly parties in private homes for ambulatory patients in San Francisco and Marin, parties for patients at Laguna Honda Home in San Francisco and a spring fund raising party.

Mrs. Walker, whose husband is owner of Walker Graphics and vice president of Campbell Investment Co., was born in San Francisco and attended San Francisco State College and took graduate courses in theater at San Jose State College.

The Walkers have two sons, Laird, 2; and Bevan 1.

Touch Of Beauty At Gas Station In San Mateo

SAN MATEO (UPI) — The customer gets an eyefull as well as a tankful at a gas station here.

Carl Fava, owner of a Shell station, has beautiful girls in hot pants or short skirts pumping gas and he says "business is up 20 per cent since the girls started working."

'The girls are my answer to the gas wars," he said.

But Fava, 31, and his girls insist it's the service that counts. The customer gets all the windows scrubbed and a free vacuuming.

PARENT AND CHILD

Reading Aloud Can Achieve The Results

By CYNTHIA PARSONS

The Christian Science Monitor News Service

I know it sounds old-fashioned, but reading aloud to children is one of the best ways in the world for children to become good readers themselves.

It's somewhat akin to taking a young, struggling violin student to a concert to listen to a professional violinist. He learns what a violin can and should sound like.

The beginning reader, struggling simultaneously with how words sound and what they mean, needs to be treated to a good story well told so that he knows what it is he is striving for when he puzzles his way through a phonics lesson of map, tap, rap, cap, sap, nap. (Just as the young violin student needs to hear something beside himself playing the scale.)

Thousands of schoolteachers do not teach their pupils to read out of well-written storybooks. Instead, most primary school teachers around the world teach reading out of specially prepared primers, generally nothing more than vocabulary exercises.

IN THOUSANDS of classrooms, in the United States as well as in most of the other countries of the world, there are no storybooks. That is, all the books that are in the classroom are the state-approved textbooks.

And because the children are the same age in most classes, and nearly all are at the same ability level in learning to read, primary school children seldom hear good, colorful, interesting, well-written stories read aloud.

Therefore, reading aloud to your child is as important as making sure he gets plenty of good food beyond what the school provides at lunchtime.

What you read aloud should be up to you and your child. Children's literature is rich in every land. There are storybooks to meet every child's interests.

But what about the children in school who have no one at home to read to them, or little access to the best storybooks?

THIS IS ONE of those wonderful areas where teacher aides can help. If your school doesn't have a "read aloud" program, why don't you help form one?

Many children arrive at school early; not a few would probably be delighted to come in and hear a story read aloud, especially if the illustrations could be flashed on the wall with the help of an overhead projector.

(You do this with two copies of the same book. While you read aloud from one copy, you have a student helper turn the illustrated pages of another copy of the overhead projector, and the listeners can see the pictures while they hear the story read aloud.)

Or perhaps you can be in a corner of the library (or make a cozier corner in an abandoned storeroom complete with comfy chairs, a lamp, and a hooked rug) and just be on hand to read aloud to any child, or group of children, who want to come and be read to.

The school district also might give some consideration to hiring high school students to go in pairs to inner city tenements and apartment building and offer to read aloud late afternoons and weekends to those children who wouldn't otherwise have an opportunity to hear good literature or see well-illustrated books.

London Exchange To Allow Women

LONDON (UPI)—Women will be allowed to become members of the London Stock Exchange next year.

The Stock Exchange Council said Tuesday applications from women will be considered from March 25, 1973, when the British and Irish exchanges merge into one organization.

A year ago male members of the stock exchange voted 1,287 to 955 to exclude women.

There are already 13 women members of provincial stock exchanges around Britain and they will automatically become members of the London exchange with the amalgamation.

Three London women already have passed the exchange examination and another half dozen could qualify for exemption from the exahs, a council spokesman said.

New Report On Woman Smokers Enough To Make Any Female Stop

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI)—Read this before you light up. Maybe you'll change your mind.

For what it is claimed smoking does to you, a woman, is enough to make any female "take the pledge" immediately.

Numerous medical studies and the U.S. Surgeon General's reports on how smoking affects health of both sexes long since have been chronicled. Now, a new publication zeroes in specifically on its effects on women.

ITS TWO authors, drawing on scientific studies, say a woman who smokes is far more likely than her non-smoking counterpart to suffer from a host of disabling conditions, any of which can interfere with her ability to perform at home or on the job. And smoking during pregnancy affects two lives—the mother's and that of her unborn child.

To those lured by the "glamorous" or "liberated" image of the woman smoker, the writers say nonsense.

"Cigarette smoking leaves a stale, obnoxious odor that permeates clothing and hair as well as lingering in rooms," they say. "Cigarette breath is far from pleasant and cigarette cough is hardly attractive; ashes and butts are ugly. Burn marks do little to enhance the beauty of clothing and furniture; and smoking can take the edge off the pleasure of such natural functions as eating and sexual intercourse."

Jane E. Brody, a science writer for The New York Times, and her husband Richard Engquist, free-lance writer and editor, have compiled the "Women and Smoking" publication for the Public Affairs Committee, a nonprofit educational organization founded in 1935 and headquartered in New York.

They trace the habit through the nation's history, recalling that the actress Katharine Hepburn once was suspended from Bryn Mawr for smoking, that two wives of presidents— Mrs. Andrew Jackson and Mrs. Zachary Taylor—were pipe smokers, and that a woman smoking was frowned on in general until the mid 1920s. The flapper made a cigarette a part of her image.

BUGT THE women have made up for any time lost.

Today, 30.5 per cent of the nation's adult women smoke. This means that nearly 20 million, age 21 and over, smoke regularly. Today in every age group above 25, the percentage of women smokers is higher than it was 15 years ago.

One third of all women in the childbearing years (15 to 44) are smokers and here is where the risk to the infant (as well as mother) comes in. Principal risks discussed by Brody and Engquist include lower than normal birthweight, stillbirth, miscarriage and impairment of the infant's heart rate and blood pressure.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

A Squeeze Does Not Have To Be Dramatic, Difficult

The average bridge player thinks of the squeeze as a dramatic and difficult play that happens late in a hand. This is often true, but sometimes the squeeze is very simple and occurs during the first few tricks. And, far from being dramatic, it may be so quiet that you won't even know it happened unless you're watching the hand like a hawk.

COVER IN DUMMY

West opens the ten of spades, and you cover with dummy's queen. You don't want West to win the first trick because he might shift to a diamond.

East wins the first trick with the king of spades, continues with the jack of spades, and then leads the ace of spades.

Naturally, you ruff with a high trump. West discards the deuce of clubs. Now you draw three rounds of trumps.

POOR EAST

Poor East can afford to throw one diamond without a pang. But then what? A club discards looks dangerous (and won't help him anyway), so East throws the seven of spades.

Don't look now, but East has been squeezed.

Declarer cashes the top clubs and ruffs a club in dummy. The last spade is led from dummy, East covers with the eight of spades — and South discards a diamond.

EAST IN TROUBLE

East is stuck with the lead, with just three diamonds in his hand. If East leads a low diamond, dummy wins with the queen; and if East leads his king of diamonds, South takes the ace and gets dummy's queen later. Either way South makes the contract.

Could East get out of this by saving all of his spades? Not really. If East discards two diamonds, South will take the ace of diamonds and then duck a low diamond to East's king. This sets up dummy's queen of diamonds as the tenth trick. The fancy end-play is then not needed.

DAILY QUESTION

With the opponents passing throughout, you open with one heart and partner raises to two hearts.

You hold:
♠ - 9 3
♥ - A K J 9 3
♦ - A 5 2
♣ - A K 5.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid four hearts.

You have 19 points in high cards, one point for the doubleton and one point for the fifth heart after partner's raise. The total is 21 points, and parnter should have enough to bring the partnership total up to the 26 points usually needed for game.

Marin Housing Board Agrees To Sell Land

The Marin County Housing Authority board has agreed tentatively to sell 4.75 acres of land it owns in the Hilarita Housing Project in Tiburon to the City of Tiburon, which plans to use the property for a recreational area.

Keith C. Kelly, authority deputy director, said the city has offered to pay the authority $36,000 for the land if Tiburon can obtain an $18,000 grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development toward the purchase.

Kelly said the sale also is contingent on HUD approval of a 101-unit low-to-moderate income housing project proposed for Hilarita.

In other business, the housing authority board voted to give the authority's eight maintenance men the same fringe benefits given to other authority employees.

Under the new system, Kelly said, fringe benefits, including vacation and holiday pay, retirement funds and health programs, will be provided directly by the housing authority. In the past, benefit funds went into a union fund established for such purposes.

Other Terra Linda High competitors were Ondina Hardy and Martha Cohen, both juniors, and senior Michael Zink.

Three Marin artists will be featured in one-man shows which will run from Saturday until June 13 at the Sight and Insight Gallery at the Cannery in San Francisco.

Novato Will Rehire All Teachers; No Pay Hikes

The Novato Unified School District board has approved rehiring current teachers without any increase in salary, even the annual increment raises, for the 1972-73 school year.

Supt. James G. Bunker reported that no teachers were cut, but he expected the district would employ "about 10 less" than the current year. The 10 teaching spots are expected to be reduced through retirements and leaves, he said.

Bunker said no teachers protested the salary freeze at Tuesday night's meeting. Teachers have been conducting a survey to determine what can be cut from the budget to provide funds for pay raises, but haven't yet reported to the board, he said.

Increment raises alone would cost about $100,000 and the district doesn't have the funds, Bunker said. If additional state funds are received "the first consideration would be giving raises to the employees," he said.

The district also accepted the resignations of three teachers, Armen Tashjian, a 20-year teacher, and Claire Witzel, a 16-year instructor, both of Marion School, and Mary Waller, a teacher at San Ramon School.

The Novato Unified School District board also:

NEW COURSES — Approved 20 new courses for junior and senior high schools, including the history of Russia, independent study projects for mentally gifted and a variety of noncredit minicourses.

ALARM BOXES — Approved installation of radio fire alarm boxes at Marion School, Sinaloa Junior High School, San Marin High School and San Ramon School.

LEAVES — Granted David E. Francis, a teacher at San Ramon School, sabbatical leave for 1972-73, at half-pay, and Jean Dondero, a teacher at Meadow Park School, maternity leave for 1972-73. Francis plans to study and travel in the U.S. and England.

CLOSED — Heard charges against two teachers at a closed session, but took no action on the matter in open session.

Library Friends Set Organization

San Rafael Friends of the Library will hold a charter night meeting to set up a permanent organization at 8 p.m. today in the city council chamber of City Hall.

All San Rafael residents interested in an organization to support the public library are invited to attend, said Jeanne Wasp of 2 Mountain View Avenue, temporary chairman.

Election of an initial slate of officers is scheduled for the meeting.

San Rafael Elks Contest Winners

The contest is based on how well the members perform the organization's initiation ceremony, according to member Lawrence Callan.

Members of the winning team who won first place individual honors are: exalted ruler Arthur J. Roberts of Fairfax, leading knight Joseph J. Sousa of San Rafael and lecturing knight Alfred A. Dalacio of Novato.

Other team members were loyal knight John Kunst of San Rafael, esquire Donald H. Donnelley of Novato, chaplain Vernon Burns of San Rafael and inner guard George Oliva of San Rafael. Team candidate was Albert G. Todaro. Members of the team will compete for the state title May 18 in San Diego.

Reed Teachers Seek Raises Of $615 Each

The Reed District Teachers Association asked the district for almost $100,000 in salary increases and expanded medical benefits.

If the request is approved, it will increase the tax rate by at least 5 cents per $100 of assessed valuation of property, according to Supt. Ralph D. Giovanniello.

Michael Eisan, chairman of the teachers association salary committee, submitted the proposal to the school board Tuesday.

It includes salary increases of $615 per teacher per year and health coverage that would include dental benefits for teachers and their dependents.

The salary adjustments represent an increase of approximately 5.5 per cent over the existing salary schedule. The present schedule runs from $7,539 for first year teachers to $15,210 for teachers with at least 17 years experience.

Giovanniello said he hopes for settlement of the negotiations by June.

Chinook Salmon Run Is Good

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (UPI)—Fisheries biologists are puzzled by a surprisingly large run of Chinook salmon headed upstream in the Columbia and Snake rivers toward their spawning grounds.

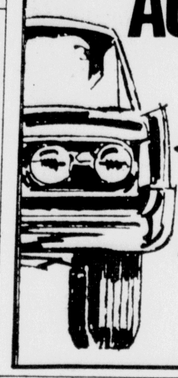

The biologists had feared this run had been all but wiped out two years ago by excessive quantities of supersaturated nitrogen in the rivers when the young fish moved downstream to the Pacific.

At that time biologists estimated that 90 per cent of the downstream migrants had been killed when they swam through waters containing excessive amounts of supersaturated nitrogen.

But Ray Oligher, fisheries biologist for the Army Engineers at Walla Walla, said this year's run of spring Chinook will be well above average.

COLLEGE OF MARIN

Student Leader Pushes A New System Through

By DICK SMULLEN

The winds of political change have blown through the College of Marin, sweeping away a student government framed in the twenties and replacing it with a responsive system.

Student government was established at the college soon after it opened in 1926.

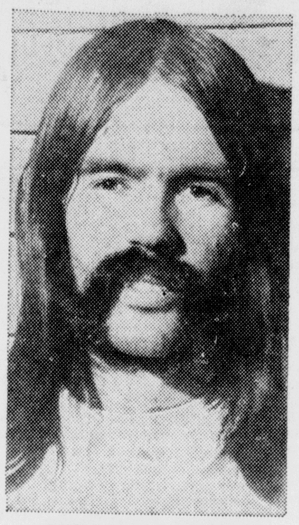

Last week, Gregory C. Fearon, president of the Associated Students, succeeded in pushing through a constitutional election, which scrapped a 14-member executive council in favor of a seven-member board of directors. Elections will be held May 15 and 16 to fill the seven-man board, and he has declined to run.

He feels he has devoted too much time to student affairs and must concentrate on earning credits toward a four-year college.

Of his experience with student government, Fearon said, "I don't want anybody else suffering the same fate I suffered. I've been here three semesters and it'll take another two more to get out. It's been a lot of work and a lot of time spent" but not enough school work done.

Fearon, a native of La Jolla, came to the College of Marin after an Army tour of Cambodia. He has served as representative, vice president and president on the old council.

"All responsibility has been vested in the president and vice president," he said, "and for the past three or four semesters, all presidents have failed their classes." He said "passing the responsibility around," was impossible as the government was set up. He added that election of a strong leader did not often result in a good relationship with the council.

GREGORY C. FEARON
Sparks new constitution

Two months ago Fearon proposed the solution eventually adopted, that students elect a seven-man board of directors, which would then choose its own president and secretary. This way, he feels, the directors will feel a closer relationship to each other and their president, and accept responsibility more easily.

The new board of directors will also be more functional, Fearon said, noting the old executive council included several "parochial" positions. Councilmen were individually elected to separate offices, and some sought a position not because they qualified for it or cared about it, but to get a voice in government, Fearon said.

Such people didn't perform the work they were elected for and hampered operations. Fearon cited the director of publicity as a student who knew nothing about publicity, but wanted to push a particular issue. According to Fearon, all councilmen who want publicity must do it themselves, as they cannot rely on the director to do it.

(The old council included 14 voting members: president, vice-president, treasurer, secretary, college center commissioner, director of activities, director of publicity, spirit and athletics commissioner, three freshman class representatives and three sophomore class representatives.)

The new board of directors will choose, from student applicants, a secretary, director of activities, director of publicity and director of the college center. The board can also name new positions as required, but no auxiliary officers will vote, only the seven board members.

When the constitution was streamlined, it was made more responsive by lowering the requirements for both initiative and recall. Under the old system, the signatures of 10 per cent of the student body (of 6,000) had been required to put a question on the ballot. The new constitution calls for one-quarter of the total voters in the most recent election.

The new constitution was approved 166 to 35, meaning that 50 signatures are needed for initiative or recall on the Kentfield campus.

Fearon said lowering the requirements made sense, since fewer than 10 per cent of the students are active in campus politics.

Apathy presented the most serious opposition to the new constitution. Fearon said a small group of interested students spent the two days prior to the election stopping people on the campus, discussing the issue and passing out leaflets.

Part-Time Policeman Nabs Pair

John Leguennec, 22 — on duty because of vacations by members of the regular force — arrested John Lauren Mott, 20, of 31 Lisbon Street, and Ronald Rogers, 19, of 260 Canal Street, both San Rafael.

Both were booked at county jail on charges of burglary. Mott was held on $500 bail to appear today in municipal court and Rogers, also known as Richard Walker, was released after posting a $500 bail and was scheduled to appear Monday in court.

Leguennec while on patrol responded to a 1:21 p.m. alarm from the 551 Cascade Drive home of Kenneth M. Paynter and David E. Garcia. At the rear of the home Leguennec said he found a door open and saw Mott run into a back room.

Leguennec followed, and inside the room he said he found Mott and Walker crouching in a corner.

Several rooms in the house had been rifled by the time Leguennec arrived, police said.

Sausalito Group Has New Officers

W. Daniel O'Connor has been chosen new president of the Sausalito Foundation, an organization dedicated to preserve the city's natural beauty and enhance its recreational and cultural resources.

Other new officers are: Raymond L. Roy, vice president; William R. Berkman, secretary, and Samuai D. Hock, treasurer. H. Thomas Rogers was named project chairman for the group.

First Session Is Mild Between Gardiner, Best

By DAVID DIETZ

The participants in the first contested race for a Marin Superior Court judgeship in 16 years engaged in debate for the first time today, and the encounter was a mild and formal one.

Attorney Charles Read Best, a 42-year-old San Anselman, appeared with incumbent Samuel W. Gardiner, 69, on radio KTIM's "Marin Sounding Board." They are vying in the June 6 election.

There was an occasional disagreement, notably on the issue of criminal grand jury viability, but essentially the engagement was a quiet affair between two soft-spoken attorneys.

Best raised the issue of age, noting that Gardiner would turn 70 in September, but the spry judge was quick in rebuttal.

If his challenger, whom the judge several times referred to as "Chuck Best," wanted to make the race a contest of "phsical agility and physical fitness," Gardiner said, "then perhaps we can have the county medical association test us . . ."

"Perhaps he'd like to engage me in a wrestling match," the judge added with smile. Best didn't accept the challenge.

The challenger raised the possibility that Gardiner, if re-elected, might retire soon after, thereby making the election moot.

In addition to the matter of the judge's age, Best said he was running "because of an awwareness of considerable dissatisfaction with the incumbent." He noted a "large amount" of attorney challenges against the judge, bringing disqualifications, and that this demonstrated a "lack of confidence" in Gardiner.

The judge retorted with a challenge of Best to publish a list of endorsements, which Gardiner said he would do, and added he believed that "80-90 per cent of the lawyers in Marin will support me."

"Yes, I get challenged," Gardiner said, "by lawyers who want to get their clients off."

The judge, who stressed during the program he merely was attempting to maintain a level of consistency with statewide practice in his sentencing practices, said he recognized public dislike of plea bargaining in criminal cases. But he said courts had neither the time nor money to try the swarm of cases they confront.

In any event, he added, "the outcome is almost the same anyway."

Best considered plea bargaining a "necessary evil."

The challenger expressed support for doing away with the criminal grand jury process, leaving such matters to the courts, but the judge saw a need for the procedure in order to protect individuals against whom a grand jury finds no case.

Both endorsed "sophisticated" separate grand juries to serve as government watchdogs.

The judge, noting he believed the death penalty to be a deterrent in some cases, said he supported it as a citizen and would apply laws given to him in the matter as a judge. Best didn't take a position.

Shoreline Trustees Set Budget Session

Shoreline Unified School District trustees will review a tentative budget of $1,685,000 at a special meeting at 1 p.m. tomorrow at Tomales High School.

Supt. Charles E. McCully said the tentative budget is $400,000 higher than the current budget, but the tax rate is expected to remain at about the same as this year's $3.76 per $100 assessed valuation. The rate will be held because the district will receive federal funds for land taken from the tax rolls for the Point Reyes National Seashore, he said.

Majority of increase will go toward restoring cuts in the educational program last year when funds were short, McCully said.

Shooting Suspect To Appear

A man suspected of gunning down a woman and her son on his front porch yesterday was due to be arraigned in Marin Municipal Court today, but the charge had not been prepared this morning.

Robert L. Carroll, 33, a Vallejo man who had been living at 718 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, was arrested after 55-year-old Minnie Torres and her son, Albert, 21, both of 41 Corte Morada in Greenbrae were shot on his porch at 9:40 a.m.

A second Robert L. Carroll — who lives at 50 Fawn Drive in Sleepy Hollow who had nothing to do with the shooting — reported he has been harassed by phone calls since the shooting.

The two victims were reported in critical condition today in the intensive care ward at Marin General Hospital.

Sheriff's deputies said the shooting occurred after the Torres went to the Kentfield home to argue about Mrs. Torres' daughter, Leilani, living there.

At the door, the woman is believed to have slapped Carroll, then he pulled an automatic pistol from his waistband and shot both. Mrs. Torres was hit in the chest and her son was hit in the stomach and left thigh.

Carroll had phoned the sheriff's Kentfield substation about 30 minutes before the shooting to say Albert Torres had threatened him and promised to arm himself, according to deputies.

A Reflection On The Tragedy At Kent State Two Years Ago

(Editor's Note: The writer, now an Independent-Journal employee, was an English major at Kent State University when violence erupted two years ago today after the American incursion in Cambodia.)

By JOHN ALEXANDER

It seemed strange then, standing there, hearing the bullets smash into the youthful bodies of my companions and finding myself cowering in the dust where I once stood so seemingly proud and selfrighteous.

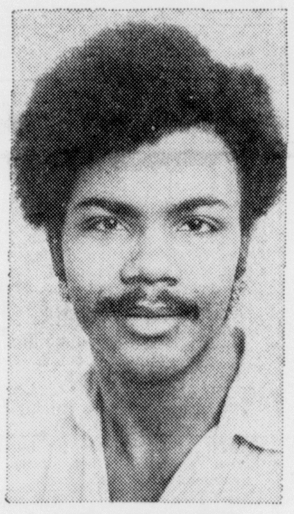

That was May 4, 1970, called by some "The Kent Massacre" and by others "National Guard 4, Students 0."

Whatever the label it seems important to me first to remember the incident as it occurred. Riots never actually create themselves on the day they happen. Somewhere, the seeds of discontent were previously sown.

In the case of Kent State, misunderstanding had lain in half-life for many years. Kent is actually a small Ohio midwestern town that, according to many of middle-aged residents, had the misfortune to have a college (20,000 students at the time of the riot) push itself into their midsts. Kent also served as a semi-sanctuary for members of the Leftist Movement.

As viewed by the Left, the Nixon Administration was stretching forth its imperialistic tentacles even further than had previous administrations. In that fatal spring quarter at Kent, the college and the town were polarized and the move into Cambodia was the necessary catalyst.

Hundreds of students began their shout in the streets which escalated into broken store windows and other acts of vandalism. The University president, Robert White, was absent and

JOHN ALEXANDER
Remembers Kent State

Gov. James Rhodes called in the National Guard.

We students had gathered on the football field and surrounding area in spite of orders against public assembly to protest the occupation of our campus.

In the tense confrontation silent anger was interspersed with shouts. Guards advanced. Rocks were thrown and the riot was on.

Standing there on the football field, I was still looking for friends I was to have met that morning. One of them, Allison Krause, I was never to see again.

When the shots broke the air, still thick from the tear gas being tossed back and forth between sides, I was sure that they were only blanks. But screams and blood filling my ears and eyes soon told me I could be hurt. I also knew that I could kill at that moment.

According to record, the guardsmen fired on command, believing themselves under snipers' attack.

So grim a story today is just a footnote to history. The struggle of antiwar movements has become passe even for members of the Left. On May 4 in 1972, most of the revolutionary Left seems to be abandoning the gun in order to reeducate itself.

In the "hip community" boredom is as prevalent as the once ultimate taboo of the culture, money. Everywhere through the state, hair is being trimmed and cut. Blue jeans have changed to casual bellbottom trousers. The Woodstock Nation is dead.

Why the quieter present, the fading of riot and involvement? Perhaps those once so bitterly disillusioned are growing up. Perhaps the once despised dollar-reward of capitalism is more in favor among the young. Perhaps, the calm is illusory, awaiting a new cause or leader to spark violence.

Whatever the cause, those four deaths at Kent seem in retrospect to have served no cause or purpose, either for the Establishment or its opponents.

Sonoma Delays Naming Of D.A.

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — The Sonoma County Board of Supervisors has agreed to delay the appointment of a district attorney until after May 31.

The board must appoint a successor to Kiernan Hyland, who was appointed a municipal court judge on April 3.

The supervisors extended the application deadline until May 31 to be certain that all interested candidates could be considered.

John Hawkes, assistant district attorney, has been serving as acting district attorney for the past month and is reportedly one of the men seeking the appointment.

Two Men Hurt As Cars Collide

Two men were injured in a two-car accident at 1:55 a.m. yesterday on Highway 101 near East Washington Street, Petaluma.

Richard W. Kincaid, 17, of Concord was reported in fair condition with severe head injuries at Community Hospital of Sonoma County, Gerald E. Holt, 21, of Santa Rosa was treated at Hillcrest Hospital for head cuts.

California Highway Patrol said Kincaid was driving southbound at a high rate of speed when his car veered across the center divider strip and struck the northbound car driven by Holt.

Antiwar Businessmen Are Against Mailliard

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — An organization of business executives opposed to the Vietnam War said today it will campaign against the reelection of Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District.

The Business Executives Move for Vietnam Peace said that Mailliard was among 12 congressmen across the nation whom its 3,000 members will oppose in a campaign called "Operation Housecleaning."

The organization's Bay Area chapter has endorsed Democrat Roger Boas, a San Francisco Supervisor, in the Sixth District, which includes Marin and part of San Francisco.

(Opposition to Mailliard's reelection also has been announced by a new Stanford University group supporting a bill to cut off funds for the war within 30 days. The group also opposes reelection of Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First District.)

The business organization, in a press conference at the San Francisco Press Club, said Mailliard consistently has voted against antiwar measures and was "out of step with the majority of voters" in his district.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Student Archeologists Learn That Nature Can Also Pollute

Nature also pollutes. Two years ago, in Delaware, Ohio, 949 students, faculty, and staff observed Earth Day by cleaning out courtyards, parking lots, and driveways contaminated with the droppings of blackbirds and pigeons. While sweeping and scrubbing, they inhaled considerable dust contaminated with a fungus; 294 developed histoplasmosis.

IN SUMMER of the same year, 103 archeology students from New York were excavating Indian ruins near Chico, Cal. Shovelsful of dry dirt were put through screens and at times, the clouds of dust were so thick, they could hardly see. Little did they know that the soil contained the fungi that cause coccidioidomycosis (kok-sid-i-oy-do-mi-ko-sis). This fungus usually found in southwestern parts of the United States causes desert or valley fever. Until this experience, the fungus had not been found so far north.

At any rate, two weeks after the dig began, one of the students became ill. But another week elapsed before the true nature of the disease was suspected. This took place after a 19-year-old girl developed the typical manifestations of fever and chills. She also complained of weakness, muscular aching, headache, chest pain, and cough. In addition, an itching, fine red rash cropped out.

A CHEST X-RAY revealed an extensive bilateral pneumonia and a skin test was positive for coccidioidin. In all, 61 of the 103 students developed the disease. Laboratory tests on the soil also were conducted. Only one of the eight samples tested was positive for coccidioidin. It came from the dirt surrounding a rodent burrow.

Coccidioidomycosis is a generalized disease. C. immitis fungi get into the body via the lungs where they produce pneumonia and, by way of the bloodstream, spread elsewhere in the body. Recovery, however, is the rule. To reduce the degree of exposure to contaminated dusts or dirt, masks should be worn.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

NATURAL OR SYNTHETIC

S. M. writes: Are natural vitamins better for the body than synthetic vitamins?

REPLY

No. Many people do not understand that when a natural vitamin is isolated, the chemist determines its chemical formula and then reconstructs the vitamin in the laboratory in much the same way as does nature. As a result, the synthetic vitamin is no different from the natural and can be concentrated to make it stronger and less expensive.

OCULAR DEBRIS

M. C. writes: Is the formation of mucus in the corners of the eyes a sign of beginning cataract?

REPLY

No. Cataract occurs inside the eye and the mucus you mention is outside. It stems from irritation or lack of cleanliness. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on cataract.

SHOCK TREATMENT

N. T. writes: Can a pregnant woman be given shock therapy without harm to the baby?

REPLY

Yes, especially when a full-blown psychosis develops at this time. There are several drugs that are useful, provided they do not harm the unborn child.

SIMILAR LEG PAINS

D. W. writes: Is Buerger's disease the same as arteriosclerosis of the legs?

REPLY

In my opinion, Buerger's is a form of premature arteriosclerosis, but some physicians would disagree. The former is limited mainly to young men who smoke. The symptoms are the same as those produced by arteriosclerosis, but the condition responds more quickly to no smoking and the operation, sympathectomy. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on Buerger's disease.

CONVERSION HYSTERIA

V. R. writes: Is conversion hysteria considered a form of nervousness? I'm taking a tranquilizer for it.

REPLY

This is a common neurosis in which internal tensions and emotional problems are manifested as real diseases. The victim develops symptoms that mimic heart trouble or peptic ulcer. Nervousness is converted into a more acceptable illness so the individual will not lose face with his associates.

Ban On Two Cancer-Linked Chemicals Asked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ralph Nader has asked the U.S. District Court to order the Agriculture Department to ban two cancer-linked chemicals used to encourage pink coloring in hot dogs, hams and other cured meats.

"What is at stake here is very simple," said Peter Schuck, an attorney for Nader's Center for Science in the Public Interest.

"On one side, we have the insistence of the meat industry that its profits depend on frankfurters and other cured products being pink instead of white. On the other side, we have the insistence of consumers that they not be subjected to the risk of cancer and other health hazards for purely cosmetic reasons."

Schuck and Harrison Wellford, another Nader associate, petitioned the Agriculture Department for a ban on sodium nitrate and sodium nitrite additives, but were denied.

Four Driver's Are Sentenced

Four persons were sentenced Monday in Marin Municipal Court by Judge David R. Baty for drunken driving.

Sentenced were:

Albert Anthony Dominguez, 20, of San Francisco, arrested Nov. 10 on Highway 101, ordered to work 12 days for Marin County Parks and Recreation Department.

Alan Dean Long, 32, of Alameda, arrested June 27 on Highway 101, sentenced to five days in jail.

SNAP TO IT, COLONEL

The tables were turned yesterday as a group of unidentified airmen relaxed while Col. Hannibal Cox, deputy commander of logistics, washed down a truck at Hamilton Air Force Base. During the past three days, airmen hired officers and noncommissioned officers to perform menial details and the "wages" were contributed to the Sickle Cell Anemia Fund. Colonel Cox's services drew the highest rate, $5 an hour. The fund has reached about $2,500 from a series of events and the incomplete tally from the officer "for sale" days was $184.

Residents To Fight Short-Hair Edict

MANILA (UPI)—A town executive has issued a directive requiring residents to cut short their long hair and moustaches before transacting business at city hall.

Mayor Jose Velarde of Pili, some 195 miles southeast of Manila, issued the edict. Residents say they will question the legality of the mayor's order.

SACRAMENTO ROUNDUP

VD Education Bill Is Shelved

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — After an opponent charged it would reduce schools to "cesspools of filth," a venereal disease education bill supported by Gov. Ronald Reagan was shelved Wednesday by a Senate committee.

Republicans on the Senate Education Committee also raised questions about provisions in the bill dealing with notification of parents.

The vote on the measure by Assemblywoman March K. Fong, D-Oakland, was put off by the panel.

"The root of the problem is the schools themselves," James Gilbert, a representative of the Citizens Committee of California, told the panel.

"The students are being indoctrinated to cast off the values of their parents," Gilbert said. "This bill would turn schools into cesspools of filth."

A key amendment in Mrs. Fong's bill would require that parents be notified 15 days in advance of the beginning of a VD course. They would be allowed to withdraw their children from the class.

Sen. John L. Harmer, RGlendale, said he favored amending the bill to require written approval or consent by parents before their children may take part in the course.

The bill was explained to the committee by Assemblyman E. Richard Barnes, R-San Diego, the author of a companion measure to appropriate $278,000 to help set up VD instruction programs.

In defense of Mrs. Fong's bill, Barnes said it "attacks the stupendous problem (of venereal disease) we have in this state."

"Young people don't realize that the so-called magic-bullet drugs do not reach some strains of VD, "Barnes said.

The bill would permit local school boards to offer VD education and to determine at what level it should be taught.

STUDENT FEE

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A bill requiring a student to pay a $5 fee when applying for enrollment in a community college has been approved by the Senate Education Committee.

The measure by Sen. John L. Harmer, R-Glendale, was sent to the full Senate Wednesday on a 8-1 vote. Harmer said 29 per cent of those who send in applications fail to show up for school.

BILL DUMPED

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A Senate committee has rejected legislation to eliminate insurance companies' "home office" property tax deductions despite the author's declaration that they are "a subsidy and favoritism for a select few."

The two measures by Sen. David A. Roberti, D-Los Angeles—including a constitutional amendment—failed on identical 4-4 votes by the Revenue and Taxation Committee.

"It's a tax loophole if there ever was one," Roberti said Wednesday, moments before his proposals went down to defeat. He said the state has lost $100 million in revenue the last 20 years through the deductions.

Under law, insurance companies are permitted to deduct from their state taxes the local property taxes they pay on their principal offices—those offices where they do the most business.

"This is a subsidy and favoritism for a select few," Roberti charged. He said that 12 California-based insurance companies owed no state taxes in 1970 "as a result of the loophole."

HOLDING ACTION

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly Elections Committee has defeated legislation designed to make it easier for candidates with no political party affiliation to be placed on the general election ballot.

The two bills by Assemblyman John Stull, R-Leucadia, would have liberalized the rarely used and complicated procedures for an independent candidate to be listed on the ballot. The measures were rejected Wednesday when a motion to hold them in committee was approved 8-4.

EQUAL STATUS

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly Ways and Means Committee has approved a bill extending to men protective labor laws which currently apply only to women.

The labor-backed bill was recently embroiled in the controversy over the proposed U.S. constitutional amendment guaranteeing equal rights for women when labor supporters attempted to tie its passage to approval of the Brown measure.

The measure by Assemblyman Willie L. Brown Jr., D-San Francisco, was sent to the floor Wednesday on a 14-5 vote.

SAFETY

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —An Assembly committee has approved legislation to overhaul the oft-criticized Division of Industrial Safety.

"Under this bill," Assembly Democratic leader Jack Fenton of Montebello told the committee, "we will provide the finest safety program in the country, and certainly the best in the history of this state without increasing state cost."

The bill, which was sent to the Ways and Means Committee on a 5-1 vote Wednesday by the Labor Relations Committee, establishes an Industrial Safety Board to investigate accidents and determine the need for prosecution.

The measure also would bar advance warning to employers of a safety inspection and require closer inspection of "high hazard" industries and those with repeated accidents or violations. It also creates a new penalty system and gives the division the power to fine violators.

STYMIED

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislation to prohibit a hospital from refusing to grant a voluntary sterilization operation for a woman because she doesn't have enough children has been stymied in the Senate Health and Welfare Committee.

The proposal by Sen. Anthony Beilenson, D-Beverly Hills, would outlaw the practice of some hospitals who reject voluntary sterilization operations or nonmedical reasons.

The bill specifically would not force hospitals to agree to perform vasectomies for men and tubal ligations for women. But if a hospital refused to perform the surgery it could not impose nonmedical preconditions that are not required for other types of surgery such as an appendectomies.

The committee Wednesday delayed a vote on the bill until next week after an abortion foe, Kenneth Mitzner of Los Angeles, voiced concern that immature 18-year-olds could opt for sterilization and regret the irrevocable decision later.

TRANSPORT

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The Senate Commerce Committee will hold hearings in San Francisco Friday on three transportation bills, including two measures allowing highway users revenue to be used for non-highway mass transit.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., will chair the hearings at 10 a.m. in the ceremonial courtroom of the Federal Building.

Reagan Says Some Radio Is Mis-used

BEVERLY HILLS (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan today said some radio stations are using their broadcasting licenses to "pander to the drug culture" and "turn over their facilities to those who shout 'revolution' at every turn."

In a prepared speech to the National Broadcasting Company affiliates luncheon, Reagan said a few such radio stations are "marching under the banner of free speech" and seem to be beyond the reach of the Federal Communications Commission.

"These are the stations that pander to the drug culture, allow obscenity on the air and turn over their facilities to those who shout 'revolution' at every turn," he said. "The audience they seek to reach are our children, our young people."

"If you are unable to find a way to use your influence to police the irresponsible broadcaster," he said, "you may not have an industry left to police."

Reagan also called on the broadcasting industry to give "equal time for those who speak up for America."

"You (the broadcasting industry) have been the most effective medium for selling toothpaste and soap; you can be just as effective selling free enterprise to those who benefit most from economic freedom —the people," he said.

Reagan also cautioned broadcasters, particularly in television, to guard against bias.

Grand Jury Exonerates Deputy

REDWOOD CITY (UPI) — The San Mateo County grand jury exonerated a sheriff's deputy Wednesday and said the fatal shooting of a youth seemingly had been used in an attempt to foster ill will against law enforcement agencies and residents of two largely black communities.

Jurors refused to return an indictment against deputy Larry Bringhurst who said Gregory White, 15, had been shot March 9 while fleeing from a stolen car.

Jury foreman Courtney Kurtz said that after "intensive, independent investigation by its own members," the jury could find no reason to return an indictment.

In a statement, the jury said it "is in complete agreement with strict law enforcement and regrets that this incident is seemingly being used in an attempt to foment and foster ill-feeling between the law enforcement agencies and the overwhelming majority of law-abiding citizens of East Palo Alto and East Menlo Park who want and are entitled to protection of the law."

White was a black and East Palo Alto and East Menlo Park are largely black.

William Gray, the East Palo Alto Municipal Council's chairman, declared the grand jury "in no way represents the black community where Gregory was shot and does not ... represent any group except middle and above middle-class white Americans."

The jury was all white.

Court Issues Bench Warrant

A bench warrant has been issued for the arrest of Vincent Joseph Salas, 23, of Sausalito, who had been released without bail to appear Tuesday for a preliminary hearing on a burglary charge.

He failed to appear and the warrant carrying bail of $2,500 was ordered.

Salas was arrested in mid-April on suspicion of breaking into the yacht Tropolino in the Sausalito Yacht Harbor after the boat's owner said he saw Salas walking away with his television set.

Street Repair Plan Approved

The Novato Plan review committee last night endorsed plans for improvement of Vallejo Avenue between Highway 101 and Seventh Street.

City plans are to widen the street, install a landscaped median, provide left turn lanes at all intersections and save existing major trees.

The committee also approved architectural and sign plans for a Bank of Marin branch to be located in the Pacheco Plaza Shopping Center, south of the Ignacio Theater.

Coffee Hour Set

A coffee hour for Dr. Ronald T. Stafford, a candidate for Marin Municipal Water District director, will be held May 11 at 8 p.m. at the home of Albert Aramburu, 10 Tara View Road, Tiburon.

Severed Phone Cable Snarls Area Service

The Point Reyes-Inverness area was temporarily without telephone service, and lines between San Rafael and Petaluma were jammed for most of the day yesterday because a main cable was severed by a work crew at the Sears Roebuck and Co. store under construction in Northgate.

Jack Eddy, district manager for Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., said the break occurred at 10:37 a.m. as a contractor's crew was installing a retaining wall and some underground wriing. The 250-pair main toll cable linking San Rafael with Santa Rosa was cut through. Repairs were not completed until last night.

The cut left Northwest Marin temporarily without any phone service, Eddy said, but service was rerouted over other lines to that area within 15 to 20 minutes.

Through calls carried by the severed cable also were rerouted, he reported. However, this overloaded other cables and caused much difficulty in placing calls between San Rafael and Sonoma County points throughout the day.

Third Round Is Tonight In Water Problem Study

Recommendations for possible changes in water rates in the Marin Municipal Water District will be among the topics to be discussed at tonight's town meeting of district water users.

The meeting, third in a countywide series of discussions of Marin's water supply problems and their solutions, will begin at 8 p.m. at San Rafael High School.

"We must face up to the fact that Marin's present water sources may not be adequate for the future," said District 2 director John M. MacPhail Jr., who will chair the meeting.

"With this as a premise," he said, "we are attempting, with residents and other users help, to determine reasonable courses of action."

One more such meeting is scheduled for next Thursday at Terra Linda High School, to be followed on May 20 by a countywide symposium on water problems to be held at Olney Hall, College of Marin.

Firemen Donate Picnic Tables

The Marinwood Firemen's Association Tuesday appropriated $120 to build four picnic tables at the community park, according to Donald B. Stiver, association president.

It will bring to 10 the number of tables at the park, and work — done by association volunteers — is expected to be completed in time for the group's May 28 barbecue, Stiver said.

The public is invited to the 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. barbecue, he added.

Oath Decision Stalls Couple's Dissolution

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI)—A man and a woman, from Malta, both 58, had their divorce trial dismissed by a judge Wednesday after they disagreed on the testifying procedure.

The wife refused to kiss and swear on a 12-inch crucifix, an old Malta custom, before giving testimony. She wanted to be sworn in the American way. The husband said he could not believe her unless she followed the Malta custom.

San Mateo County Judge Louis B. DeMatteis told Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pisani, who have been married 32 years and have 12 children, that their dissolution of marriage action was dismissed until the couple could reach an agreement about which oath to take.

Book Distributor Loses Bid To Suppress Evidence

A San Rafael book distributor, facing trial for having obscene magazines in his Belvedere Street warehouse on two different occasions has lost a bid in Marin Municipal Court to suppress the evidence.

Judge David Menary turned down the request, which claimed the searches were made without probable cause, whereupon the attorney for Donald Calvin Warnecke, 40, of Petaluma immediately appealed to Superior Court.

The warehouse of the San Oaks Publishing Distributors at 62 Belvedere Street was raided by San Rafael police armed with a search warrant Nov. 22, 1969, after Warnecke himself called in police to complain that two of his trucks loaded with magazines had been stolen from the warehouse. Left behind by the burglars, but not by the police were magazines like "Sexscope," "World Love and Sex," "Sex Quest and Query," and "Deviant Sexual Behavior." All were heavily illustrated.

Alvin H. Goldstein Jr., then a municipal court judge, ordered the evidence suppressed in 1970 because the search warrant was too vague, but that decision was reversed last year by the appellate division of Marin Superior Court.

Stinson Beach Safe And Contents Gone

The burglars pried a side door at Ed's Superette on Calle Del Mar between 7:30 p.m. Saturday and 6:30 a.m. Sunday, deputies said.

Giants Finish Losing Home Stand; Mets Win, 8-5

By JOE SARGIS

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—For an athlete, nothing beats home cooking, but the San Francisco Giants have to be happy about hitting the road today.

That's because their refurbished home—Candlestick Park — hasn't been the least bit kind in the first home stand of the year. Wednesday's 8-5 loss to the New York Mets, the club's third in a row and 11th of the 13-game stand, served as a classic example.

Balls bounced weirdly off the artificial turf, Bobby Bonds lost a ball in the high sky and couldn't handle another that bounced into the right field corner, and Tito Fuentes was slow going back for a popup in short center, and lost it, and made a costly throwing error.

Yogi Berra, the Mets skipper, said it best of all about the Giants.

"When you are losing you make mistakes," Berra said. "It happens and there isn't much you can do about it but run out and try again. I'll tell uou this, the Giants are a dangerous club. They are just going bad now."

Shaky pitching hurt the Giants in Wednesday's loss as much as the poor play in the field. The Giants were down 4-1 in the top of the eighth when Jim Fregosi led off with a towering shot to right center. Bonds camped under the ball with Willie Mays alongside and then at the last second ducked away. It went for a triple and Ed Kranepool followed with a ringing double. Before the inning was over, the Mets had four more runs and the Giants were behind 8-1.

San Francisco rallied for three runs in the bottom of the eighth and filled the bases with one out in the ninth. Bonds came up at the point, against ace New York reliever Tug McGraw, with a chance to tie it with a homer but settled for a sacrifice fly.

Dave Kingman, who drove in two earlier runs with a triple and two singles, fouled out to end the game.

"You have to remember we are a very young club," manager Charlie Fox said in the gloom of the dressing room. "It's tough enough to calm down a youngster when you are winning. When you are losing it's even worse. We simply are giving away too many runs and with our pitching not as good as it should be the pressure is getting to be too much to handle."

Fox used starter Steve Stone as an illustration.

"The kid was jumpy before the game and when they got to him for a couple of hits in the first, he lost all his concentration," said Fox. "I had no other choice than to take him out."

Fox used five pitchers in all and the only ones to go unscored upon were the oldsters—Don McMahon and John Morris. Ron Bryant gave up one run in three innings but Jerry Johnson, an enigma to Fox, was tagged hard still another time. He gave up the four eighth inning runs that put the game out of reach.

Tommy Agee and Fregosi were the New York hitting stars: Agee had two doubles and a single, scored twice and drove in a run while Fregosi had a triple and two singles and scored one run. The Mets piled up 13 hits in all as they rolled to their third straight victory and the 10th in the last 12 games. They completed their West Coast swing with seven victories in nine games and lead the National League East.

The Giants are in Philadephia for the weekend and then go to Montreal and New York before coming home again on May 16. They play nine away games on this trip.

SPORT NOTES

Team First, Wife Second

By RALPH CHATOIAN

You always hear that a professional football coach's wife ends up a distant second to the team itself, and Oakland Raiders' John Madden proved the point last night at a press review of the Raiders' 1971 highlight film.

With the Islands Ballroom of the Marriott Inn on the Berkeley Marina filled with Raider front office people, sports writers and their wives, all of whom had just gulped down some roast beef, Madden was introduced. Standing before the microphone, Big John introduced his assistant coaches, the P. R. workers, ticket manager and was even looking around for the beer and peanut vendors.

Then came some optimistic words to the effect the Raiders would be better in '72 after the rookies of '71 had a year of experience behind them.

About halfway through Madden's presentation, he declared, "Oh my God! I forgot my wife." After the chuckles died down, he introduced his better half, Virginia, an attractive blonde. Then it was back to football.

Madden said he felt the team "got some good out of the season," and pointed out that although a record of eight wins, four losses and two ties would have been good enough to get to the playoffs in other years, it wasn't good enough last year. Madden has already started his battle plan to reach the playoffs this time.

"We will be working with our rookies and younger players this weekend," he said. In mapping out his strategy, he declared, "You play the pre-season games to get ready for the regular season games. You play the season games to get into the playoffs, then you work for the Super Bowl. That's where we want to be at the end of this season."

The highlight film, entitled "Their Finest Hour," is a 27-minute production filled with great catches by Fred Biletnikoff and Ray Chester and runs by Charlie Smith and Marv Hubbard and interceptions by newcomer Jack Tatum. With such an exciting offense to shoot, the photographers had a field day.

The film is available free for group showings and can be obtained by either telephoning the Raiders' film department or by writing to the Raiders, 7811 Oakport Street, Oakland, 94621.

A MINOR LOOK — The report from minor league teams doesn't look too dazzling for the Marin side. Novato's John Dolinsek is batting .269 for the Oklahoma City Astros of the American Association, one home run, and Tom Corder, also Novato, is at .229 with two homers for Bakersfield Dodgers of the California League. Another Novatan, Tom Thomas, is only at .172 with Salem, Va. Pirates of the Carolina League and Dewey Forry, San Rafael, is at .125 for the Daytona Beach Dodgers of the Florida State League. In three games pitched, Russ Dillon of Novato, with Richmond, Va. Braves of the International League, has no decisions and an earned run average of 11.59.

ADDED ITEMS — Don Alvarado, former Drake gridder who is trying to win a starting job as a senior split end on the Stanford football team, caught five passes for 53 yards in last Saturday's spring scrimmage . . . San Rafael National senior division Little Leaguers are going on a door-to-door fund raising campaign selling key chain registration tags, an idea developed by Bud Weisenburg, one of the Little League pops. The tags cost $1, and if keys are lost, the finder just has to drop them into a mailbox and they'll be sent to league officials who will then check the registration list and return to the rightful owner . . . If you're planning to see the Giants at Candlestick on the Saturdays of May 20 (Atlanta), June 3 (Pittsburgh) or June 10 (Chicago) take some makeup along. Those are the days NBC has picked for the televised Games of the Week, and because of this, the starting time has been pushed up to 12:15 p.m. those days.

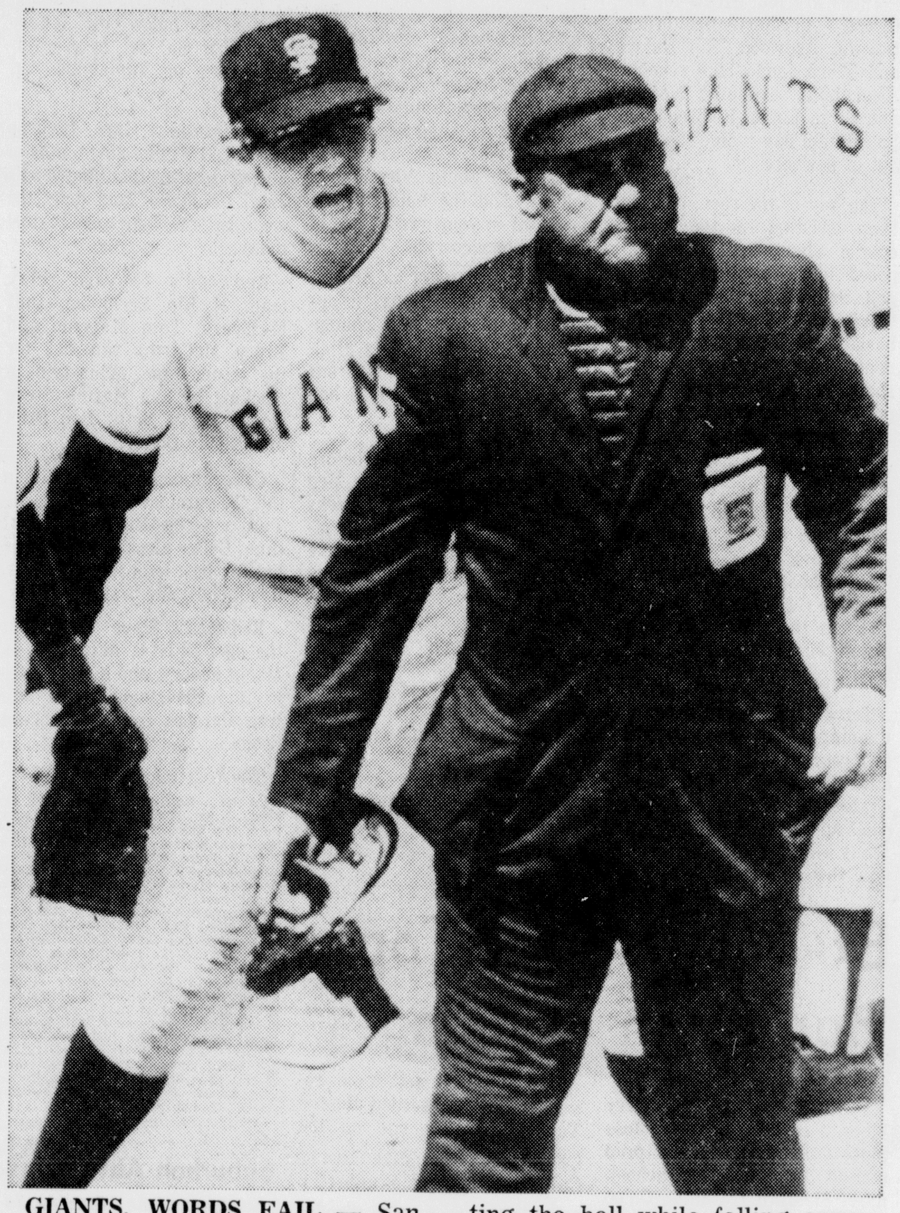

The 'Thunderchickens'

STANFORD (UPI) — If a nine-member student-alumni committee has its way, the new nickname of Stanford University's athletic teams will be "Thunderchickens."

The name as coined by Stanford defensive lineman Pete Lazetich for the squad's defensive line during the 1970 season. The name was often applied to Stanford's overall defensive teams which won two consecutive Rose Bowls in 1971 and 1972.

The Thunderchicken recommendation was sent Wednesday to Stanford President Richard Lyman who must find another name to replace the Indians which has been dropped.

"I don't see anything wrong with the new proposed nickname," said new Stanford football coach Jack Christiansen. "But I don't see anything extra in it, either."

GIANTS, WORDS FAIL — San Francisco Giant third baseman Alan Gallagher tried to argue with umpire Paul Pryor in the sixth inning yesterday at Candlestick Park concerning the New York Mets' Cleon Jones' bat hitting the ball while falling away from a pitch. Catcher Fran Healy tagged Jones at the plate, but Pryor ruled against the Giants. Jones was subsequently retired. The Giants lost, 8-5.

Lakers Need 2 Wins For Crown In NBA

Wilt Aids Thrashing Of Knicks

Chamberlain, who hit 8-of-8 against Milwaukee in an earlier playoff round, sank 8-of-11 free throws Wednesday night as the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Knicks 107-96 for a 2-1 edge in their National Basketball Association championship series.

WILT

Big Wilt, stuffing, scooping and lobbing shots, was deadly from the field with nine connections after missing his first attempt. Chamberlain's 26 points were high for the game and part of a balanced attack that now has Los Angeles believing it can take two straight from the Knicks here and end the series on the West Coast on Sunday.

Gail Goodrich tallied 25 points for the Lakers and Jerry West finally broke a scoring slump with 21 points. His basket with 3:05 left in the game gave him an unprecedented 4,001 career playoff points, a figure achieved in 133 postseason games.

SHARMAN

Los Angeles Coach Bill Sharman, trying for back-to-back pro titles after leading Utah to the American Basketball Association championship last year, said the victory "was not one of our better games, but under the circumstances we're satisfied. Wilt was tremendous, Gail did well and it was good to see Jerry shooting better.

Sharman, his throat still raspy from shouts of encouragement during the playoffs, said the Lakers put pressure on New York's outside shooting with a great defense.

REBOUND BATTLE

Los Angeles won the rebound battle 54-48 but actually won at the foul like with 27 successful free throws to 14 for the Knicks.

New York, with Dave DeBusschere's injured side limiting him only to first half action, led 28-23 at the end of the first quarter and trailed 52-47 at halftime. A devastating 20-5 surge leading off the third quarter gave Los Angeles a 20-point lead at 72-52 and was too much for a New York squad that cut the deficit in the last quarter to seven points at 101-94.

Chamberlain, showing slight signs of fatigue resulting from the long pro basketball season, said the turning point of the game occurred "when we played good defense and they kept missing their shots."

WEST

West, a beaten finalist seven times in the last 10 years, said the Lakers accomplished their mission by winning this game.

"It's certainly nice to know we'll get at least a split here," West said. "That's exactly what we hoped to get because it'll put the pressure on them to win again in Los Angeles. But now, of course, we hope to sweep the two games here."

West added that "good defense and a lot of running is what won it for us in the third period. That was the kind of period like we played all year. (Happy) Hairston and Wilt got inside and everyone played defense and was running."

Hatchery Disease Bill Set

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — A bill aimed at controlling fish hatchery diseases that plague steelhead trout, salmon and other sportsmen's favorites has been introduced in the House of Representatives, cosponsored by Rep. William S. Mailliard, (R-San Francisco).

The bill would enable federal Department of Interior officials to order destruction of diseased fish in hatcheries and would for the first time permit federal payment to hatcheries whose fish had to be destroyed. Formerly, only state officials had authority to order destruction as a measure against fish diseases, Mailliard's office said yesterday.

The bill also would enable the Department of Interior to block importation of diseased fish into the coutry. "Whirling disease," one of the most common salmon and steelhead killers, has come in with young fish from Europe, but is believed to have been eradicated from California hatcheries at present, Mailliard's office reported.

Showers Make A's Week Easy

OAKLAND (UPI) —Rainy weather back East has made it a lazy week for the Oakland Athletics.

Showers washed out both games in Boston Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Righthander Jim Hunter of the A's had to keep his pitching arm under dry wraps for fear it might become rusty. He has been waiting since Tuesday to take his turn in the rotation.

Today is another open date for the Athletics who took advantage of it to work out at the dry Oakland Coliseum.

The New York Yankees come to the Coliseum for the start of a three-game series Friday night. Righthander Steve Kline of the Yankees is scheduled to face Hunter.

Oakland also will meet Milwaukee and Boston during the nine-game homestand.

Lefthander Vida Blue is back in uniform and working out with the Athletics but he won't be ready to step into the rotation until the end of the month.

On Wednesday, the A's placed injured righthanded pitcher Chuck Dobson on waivers. If he clears, the A's plan to send him to the minor leagues for more work.

Dobson, 15-5 last season, has been on the disabled list since the season began. He underwent surgery on his elbow last fall.

"We want to give him a chance to play himself back into shape in the minor leagues," said manager Dick Williams.

49er May Get Cards' Krueger

BRYAN, Tex. (UPI)—Is Rolf Krueger, the 250-pound baby brother of Charlie Krueger, coming to the San Francisco 49ers?

The 6-4 defensive lineman played out his option last season with with the St. Louis Cardinals and said Wednesday he expects to sign with another team in "three of four days."

"I can't say much about my plans, said the 25-year-old Krueger from his home here, "but I'm not going back to the Cardinals. That's definite."

The 49ers could use another defensive lineman to replace end Cedrick Hardman who underwent off-season surgery on his knee as a result of a basket-

Tierney qualified for Saturday's final in the 100 and 220 dashes, in seventh place times of 10 second flat and 22.5, respectively.

Blasingame was third qualifier in the 120 high hurdles in 14.7, and fifth in the 440 intermediate hurdles in 57.4.

KENTUCKY DERBY

The Triple Crown Is Riva Ridge's Goal

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — The Triple Crown has been an elusive prize beyond the ability of horses for almost a quarter of a century but Riva Ridge, favored to win Saturday's Kentucky Derby, has been trained specifically to win it.

"It's a challenge and you want to meet a challenge," said Mrs. John Tweedy as she watched Riva Ridge gallop over the Churchill Downs track. She has taken over management of the Meadows stable owned by her father, Christopher T. Chenery, who has retired because of illness and advancing age.

Twenty horses ere expected to be named for the Kentucky Derby when the entry box closed today but Mrs. Tweedy and Lucian Larin only consider it a first step towards winning the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes as well.

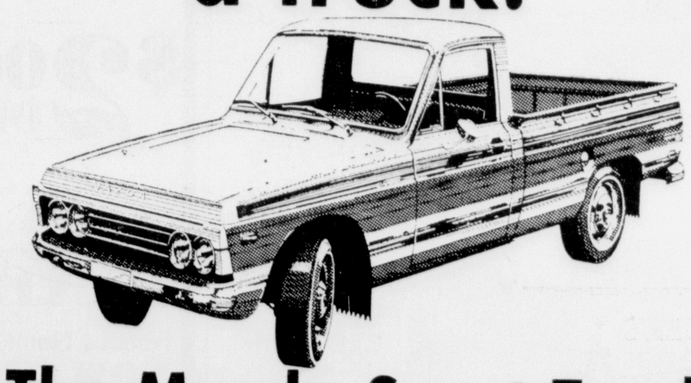

Also expected to be entered for the 1¼ mile race were Hold Your Peace, No Le Hace, Key to the Mint, Head of the River, Freetex, Sensitive Music? Hassi's Image, Lester's Jester, Introductivo, Kentuckian, Dr. Neale, Big Brown Bear, Big Spruce, Our Trade Winds, Pacallo, Majestic Needle, Napoise, Bold Music and U Pos Ent.

But Lester's Jester, either Majestic Needle or Napoise, Bold Music, and even Key to the Mint may drop out of the picture before the Kentucky Derb is run for the 98th time on Saturday.

Key to the Mint is the only "class" horse among the possible defectors. Trainer Elliott Burch wanted all the time he could get before deciding to start Key to the Mint four days after he won the derby trial stakes on Tuesday.

Usually owners and trainer point for the Triple Crown classics one race at a time. With Riva Ridge it was a package deal and he goes to the post in the Kentucky Derby with only three races behind him.

Lutz-Ashe Duo Tough To Beat

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Bob Lutz and Arthur Ashe are apparently a tough tennis combination to beat.

Ashe and his Tiburon partner Lutz defeated Ray Barth and Tom Leonard, 6-4, 6-3 in Alan King Tennis tournament doubles play here yesterday. In other first round doubles action, Rob Maud and Allan Stone bested Frank Froehling and Charles Pasarell, 6-3, 6-4; and John Alexander and Terry Addison decisioned Ray Ruffels and Bob Carmichael, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Basketball

RALEIGH, N.C. — Tommy Burleson, star center of the North Carolina State University basketball team, goes on trial June 12 on charges of breaking into campus pinball machines.

Burleson, at 7-foot-4 the tallest collegiate basketball player in the nation, was arrested Wednesday with another student, Bruce Schneider, and released on $600 bond.

Police said three coin-operated pinball machines located in the university's Sullivan Dormitory were broken into Tuesday night and an undetermined amount of money was taken.

ITHACA, N.Y. — Jerry Lace, head basketball coach at Cornell University, who became embroiled in a racially tinged player controversy last season, was named to an administrative post Wednesday night.

A Cornell spokesman said Lace, 35, had been appointed an Administrative Assistant in the school's Department of Physical Education and Athletics. Jon T. Anderson, athletic director, said a search would begin immediately for a new coach.

During the 1971-72 season, Lace's team was involved in a controversy over demands by black students that they be given more starting roles. There were allegations of discrimination and a "player limit" for blacks.

Football

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — National Football League owners will have to respond within a "short while" to a preliminary National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) finding on player fines and artificial turf, a NLRB spokesman said.

The NLRB's Kenneth Haan said the matter will go to a NLRB trial examiner if the owners don't agree with the board's ruling.

The board's Minneapolis office Wednesday charged the NFL owners with violating NLRB regulations on bargaining in connection with fines to players and artificial turf.

The NLRB said owners must return more than $20,000 in player fines and negotiate with the NFL Players' Association on the matter of fines and the use of artificial playing fields.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Jim Malloy proved Wednesday that speed is not strictly an Unser family tradition and shoved Bobby and Al to second and third place in practice clockings for the May 27 Indianapolis 500-mile race.

Malloy of Denver, Colo., was clocked at 184.8 miles per hour in his Dan Gurney-built Eagle, which is identical to the one Bobby Unser toured the Indianapolis oval at an average better than 190 m.p.h. in tire tests last month.

The Albuquerque, N.M. Unser brothers were next in line at 183.299 for Bobby and 181.4 for Al.

Golf

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — The feminine touring pros began action today in the 72-hole Sealy Ladies Professional Golfers Association Classic at the Desert Inn Country Club for $50,000 in prize money.

The Sealy tournament is the only fixture on the ladies PGA tour in which the women play with amateur partners for the entire 72 holes and a host of sports and theatrical celebrities were on hand to join their lady partners.

Sandra Palmer is the defending champion in the Sealy and will be out to gain the first prize of $10,000 a second time.

GIANTS

Wednesday gave him 20 for the season—tops in the majors. His play to this point has been the only bright spot for the Giants but he can't do it alone. As Fox is beginning to find out.

Seals To Get Coach 'Within Two Weeks'

OSHAWA, Ontario (UPI)—California Golden Seals general manager Garry Young says that the team's new coach will probably be picked "within the next two weeks."

"We're working on something now," he said here Wednesday.

Out Of Action

Pitcher Chuck Tyson of the Sohner Tree Service softball team in San Anselmo will be out of action for at least two months after arm surgery and shortstop Ron Blum is sidelined with a knee injury. They suffered the injuries during a doubleheader in Santa Rosa last Monday.

U.S. Soccer Team To Host Mexico

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The U.S. soccer team faces a strong challenge in its Olympic hopes when it hosts Mexico Wednesday night at Kezar Stadium.

The U.S. is currently tied for first place in the second round of zone eliminations for the Olympic Games. Two teams from among the U.S., Mexico, Guatemala and Jamaica will make it into the 16-team Olympic finals at Munich and a win over the Mexicans would virtually cinch a spot for the Yans.

PREP NOTES

Golf Title Run Like Vietnam

By LEW CODDINGTON

The Marin County Athletic League golf race is beginning to look more and more like South Vietnamese politics in the early sixties. Every day, somebody is assassinated. Every time somebody steps outside his palace, his life is in danger.

There are four rivals for the throne — in alphabetical order, Novato, Redwood, San Rafael and Terra Linda high schools. Everybody expected Novato and Terra Linda. Redwood and San Rafael have come sneaking out of nowhere.

The key to the race, coaches keep insisting, is the "home course advantage." It is supposed to be more marked in golf than in any other sport. Obviously. Consider playing basketball where your opponents could vary the size and shape of the court and the position of the basket.

The first half of the season was completed yesterday, and it seems clear that the advantage would have to go to the team with the big win on the road. Novato has such a win, having beaten San Rafael at Peacock Gap. Novato, however, also has the big loss at home, having capitulated to Terra Linda.

Terra Linda plays every remaining match but one at its own course, Marin County Club, and that match is with a noncontender. Should the home rule apply, the Trojans, currently 5-2, will finish 12-2 and win the championship. Redwood and Novato will be 11-3 and San Rafael 9-5.

A recent abbreviated poll of the coaches (two) revealed confusion. One liked Novato and one liked San Rafael. The schedule likes Terra Linda and fate likes Redwood, which needs the golf title in its bid to win all five spring sports.

Of course, all of this presumes that nobody else loses to Tamalpais at its intricate little Mill Valley course. The Indians could be spoilers in the race and in fact defeated San Rafael Tuesday.

Just like South Vietnamese politics. And the ability to be dominant in your own palace is the Key to victory.

INDIAN REPORT — After a brief flurry of activity, it appears the movement to change the name of Tamalpais High School's athletic teams from Indians to something else has died.

The matter has been before the student council for two months, and about two weeks ago a student referendum almost was staged. "We have other student body elections going on, however, and there is a matter of priority," said John McSween, director of student activities and finance. "Most of the enthusiasm for the idea seems to have died. It was just one or two students who were really concerned."

This despite the fact that Stanford University changed its name and Lowell High of San Francisco took steps in that direction.

Ex-Tam Netter Tops Hargey In Tennis

I-J Special Report

PORTOLA VALLEY — Terry Moor, a sophomore at San Jose State College and former prep star at Tamalpais High School, upset Stanford freshman Chico Hargey 7-6, 4-6, 7-6 yesterday in first round play at the 72nd annual California State Tennis Championships.

Hargey plays number three on the powerhouse Stanford team and was exempt from early qualifying for the state test going on at Alpine Hills here and at Golden Gateway courts in San Francisco.

Moor, just back from a swing through Europe, had to go through the qualifying rounds to join the final field, but obviously is a much improved netter.

But Stanford got some revenge when top-seeded Roscoe Tanner, number one on the Cards' team, beat Mike Caro of Cal 6-1, 6-3, and Stanford's number two man, Alex (Sandy) Mayer, beat John Zwieg of Greenbrae 6-3, 6-2. Barry MacKay of Ross whipped another Stanford netter, Paul Sidone, 6-2, 6-4.

Farrar's High Jump Rates No. 1

San Marin and Redwood high school track and field stars warmed up for their decisive dual meet today by equaling or surpassing several of the Marin County Athletic League's best dual meet standards last week.

However, the week's finest achievement was a 6-foot-4 high jump by Mark Farrar of San Rafael, second highest in county history, and just an inch and a quarter below the league record of 6-5½ set by Gerald Robertson of Tamalpais last year.

San Marin's Gary Lathrop ran a 4:31.5 mile, nine-tenths of a second better than Redwood's Jan-Eric Moller had done the week before. They were to duel today.

Redwood's 440-yard relay team of Kip Kermoian, Duff McEvers, Tom Malvino and Bruce McCarthy ran 45.2 for the second time, again tying a clocking by San Marin's Steve Goins, Larry Butti, Bob Briot and Randy Colfer.

Colfer, meanwhile, ran 21.0 in the 180-yard low hurdles to tie Tam's Greg Biber for best time. Colfer already was on the list for best long jump (22 feet, five inches) and best mile relay.

Redwood's Steve McGee put the shot 54-11 ¾, third best in Marin history, and needs another 20 inches to erase Drake's Reg Carolan from the record books.

The best marks:

Suburban Auto Wins

Suburban Auto trimmed Jacobsen Auto, 4-3 in eight innings, and Loose decisioned Deck House, 3-2, in San Rafael Recreation Department adult softball last night at Albert Park.

Pitching Dominates Marin Prep League

In computing Marin County Athletic League pitching and batting averages, the statistician's most useful tool is not a calculator, but a microscope.

Pitching is so dominant that earned-run averages and batting averages both have dwindled to nearly infinitesimal figures. Only 11 players with 18 or more at-bats are averaging above .300, while eight pitchers with 18 or more innings hurled are allowing less than two earned runs a game.

Clifford Hall of Tamalpais High School stroked three hits in six times up to regain the batting lead at .448. Tom Wilson of San Rafael vaulted to second at .435 and John Billings of Drake moved into third at .429.

New faces in the top 10 include Donald Parker of Tamalpais in fifth, Paul Riccardi of Marin Catholic (generally acclaimed the MCAL's best defensive catcher) in eighth, and Jeff Vogel of Redwood, 10th.

Marty Moroski of Novato took over the leadership in earned-run average with 0.25, computed on a seven-inning basis. He and Redwood hurlers Mark Ruggles and Gene Frey are all under 1.00.

Moroski, Ruggles and Mike Sabel of Terra Linda are tied for the lead in victories with four each. Sabel is the league's workhorse with 43⅓ innings pitched.

Rangers, Bruins Vie

NEW YORK (UPI) —The Boston Bruins, rolling along with a nine-game winning streak and an apparent hex over the Rangers, can put a lock on their second Stnaley Cup championship in three years with another victory over New York tonight.

Boston leads the best-of-seven set, two games to nothing, following a pair of one-goal victories on its home rink, and if recent history means anything, the Bruins may very well wind up the series with triumphs tonight and in Sunday afternoon's nationally televised game.

Met Fans Usually See A Lively Mays

(Second of a series)

Whenever Willie Mays visits New York he bubbles like an effervescent bottle of pop brimming with zestful liveliness. And it's the same with Mays when the New York Mets visit Candlestick Park. Perhaps it's because Mays loves to perform for New York baseball fans in person or on TV.

The captain of the Giants looks like the Say Hey kid of two decades ago when he visits Shea Stadium, home of the Mets. He momentarily forgets his age, his aches and pains in accepting thunderous ovations from New York fans who still remember him as the most exciting player to hit the baseball scene in 1951

SO IT WAS very understandable why Mays, now on the eve of his 41st birthday and approaching the twilight of his great career, went to Charlie Fox Monday and had a heart-to-heart talk with the manager of the Giants.

Fox had scratched Mays' name from the lineup the day before. In fact, Fox made out the lineup without Mays' name in it. The manager wasn't giving Mays a rest. After all, the 1972 baseball season had been under way for only two weeks. Mays couldn't be in need of a rest that early even at his age. What Fox had decided was to bench Mays for youth. He didn't know when he made out the lineup that Mays wasn't feeling well.

THUS, WHEN it later was announced that Fox sent Mays home because he was sick, it seemed that was the reason Mays missed both games of last Sunday's doubleheader between the Giants and Expos. However, Mays knew differently and so did Fox.

Neither Mays nor Fox disclosed what was said Monday during their talk behind closed doors in the manager's office. But it wasn't illogical to assume that Mays asked the manager to put him back in the lineup for Tuesday night's game.

Prior to the closed door meeting, Fox already had made out his Monday lineup for the series opener in Candlestick against the Mets. It was the same as the Sunday lineup and it featured a youthful outfield without Mays — Ken Henderson in center, Bobby Bonds in right, Garry Maddox in left.

"YOU WILL BE watching that lineup more than you may have anticipated," said Fox.

In other words, Fox diplomatically was saying that Mays had been benched. But, at least for Tuesday night's game, Fox put Mays back in the lineup, shifted Henderson to left and scratched the rookie, Maddox.

Fox, a great admirer of the wondrous feats Mays has performed through the years but also a realist who can't ignore Mays' .146 batting average this year, may have been prompted to postpone temporarily his youth decision because of what Mays has done for the Giants and baseball in bygone years.

However, a manager rarely is so motivated and, even if he were, he would be the last to admit it.

Cubs Feast On Braves' Pitching

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

If the Chicago Cubs are walking around smiling today, it's because of the Atlanta Braves' pitching staff.

Cub batters literally have been feasting on Atlanta pitching. Billy Williams and Jose Cardenal led the Cubs to their second straight 12-1 victory over the Braves Wednesday by smashing seven hits and knocking in eight runs between them.

Williams had a three-run homer and two singles and Cardenal knocked in five runs with two singles, a double and a triple as the Cubs ripped four Atlanta pitchers for 17 hits. In the last two days, Cub batters have raked Atlanta pitchers for 24 runs and 32 hits.

In other National League action, New York downed San Francisco 8-5, San Diego edged Montreal 3-2 in 14 innings, Philadelphia beat Los Angeles 5-1, Pittsburgh nipped Houston 3-2 and St. Louis defeated Cincinnati 2-1.

Leron Lee's two-out single in the 14th inning scored Enzo Hernandez from second base and gave the Padres their victory over Montreal. Lee had been hitless in his first five at bats before driving in the winning run off Denny Lemaster.

Steve Carlton pitched a six-hitter for his fourth victory in five decisions and Don Money doubled in two runs in the fourth inning as the Phillies beat Los Angeles.

Rennie Stennett tripled in two runs to help Pittsburgh beat the Astros and end a six-game losing streak. Dock Ellis, pitching for the first time in two weeks, allowed four hits in six innings to gain the victory.

Ed Crosby singled in two runs in the fourth inning and Reggie Cleveland made them stand up with a six-hitter as the Cardinals edged Cincinnati.

TREVINO TALKS GOLF

A Competitive Game

My golf game thrives on competition. So will yours. All I know is you can't play till you pay. Some of those sharks I know back at Tennison Park in Dallas still take their cuts at me when I'm in town. But I play their best ball — it keeps me sharp and I have to bear down every shot —and that way I seldom lose my competitive edge.

I've played golf every way you can play it —from standing on one leg to busting balls with Dr. Pepper bottles. There have been times when it cost me because the cats I played with — Dandy Dick Martin, Arnold Salinas, Titanic Thompson and that gang — threw them dimes around like they were manhole covers.

A kid doesn't have to bet to play this game. But he has to compete. I mean in junior tournaments and against caddies who're the future touring pros. You learn to win from losing. Competition teaches you about golf strategy. There's more to this game than hitting balls.

Ervin Proposes Delaying Pro Cage Merger

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sam J. Ervin, Jr., chairman of the Senate Antitrust and Monopoly subcommittee, Wednesday told Congress the proposed merger of the two pro basketball leagues should be delayed.

Ervin said Congress should wait until it sees how National Basketball Association commissioner J. Walter Kennedy handles the charges the the owners of one team had secret ties with Las Vegas gambling casinos.

Ervin said that commissioners have been in the habit of taking strong action against the players but not the owners.

Old Rookie, Young Veteran Aid Twins

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

An old rookie and a young veteran are keeping the Minnesota Twins in first place in the American League West.

The Twins, who slumped to fifth place last season after winning the division crown in 1969 and 1970, are contenders again because of the hitting of 29-year-old Bobby Darwin and the pitching of 21-year-old Bert Blyleven.

Darwin drove in four runs Wednesday night to help the Twins beat the Milwaukee Brewers 7-0 as Blyleven boosted his record to 4-0 on a four-hitter.

In the only other American League games, Detroit beat Kansas City 6-1 as Mickey Lolich joined Blyleven as the only four-game winners in the league and Cleveland edged Texas 2-1. Three games, Oakland at Boston, Chicago at Baltimore and California at New York, were rained out.

Litton Industries Has Potential In Long Haul

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Would you tell me what the potential is for Litton Industries (NYSE)? We have some stock which has decreased considerably in value. — J.H. & R.W.

A. While no consolation, you are not alone in your plight. Hopes for a nearterm earnings turnaround at Litton were recently dashed when the company reported a loss for its second fiscal 1972 quarter, through January 31, that drastically reduced first half earnings to a penny a share. Caused by after-tax write-offs in the $16.8 million area, the loss resulted from a realinment of facilities. It is widely anticipated that this diversified concern will have other write-offs in its third quarter, which will render 1971-72 profits well below fiscal 1971's depressed $1.27 a share.

In response to this news, Litton shares have plummeted to the lowest level in more than 10-years and may likely remain there until a turnaround is effected. Over the long haul, however, Litton does have the potential for a worthwhile revival as the economy improves. Having only moderate risk at these levels, shares may be held for partial recovery.

Q. In 1963 I purchased 11 shares of General Foods (NYSE) at $42 for my son. The price is now $28. Should I sell the shares and take the loss? — N.K.

A. The decline in GF's share price is in response to lower earnings anticipated for the year ended March 31. Incidentally, this would be the first annual decline in two decades. In the December quarter $47 million was charged off against fast food operations. Rix Systems will be phased out and Burger Chef cut back to about half its current number of outlets. A realignment of top management was also announced by General Foods.

The FTC suit against four cerealmakers including GF has also been a factor in the weak performance of the shares. Settlement of this charge will undoubtedly take several years. In view of the company's aggressive marketing methods, the present earnings setback should be a temporary abberation. Shares have above-average recovery potential.

Wall Street Keeps Eye On Vietnam

NEW YORK (UPI) —Stocks moved lower during the first two hours today in moderate trading as traders and investors kept an anxious eye on events in Vietnam. Some selective buying was apparent.

Of the 1,522 issues crossing the tape, 732 declined and 441 advanced. The two-hour turnover amounted to more than 5,510,000 shares.

The deteriorating position of allied forces in the Vietnam conflict has been a major influence in the sharp decline so far this week, analysts said. Traders also remain concerned over Price Commission profits policies. The commission has suspended increases of some 1,500 corporations which have not filed required earnings reports.

But some analysts noted selective buying among blue chips and glamors which recently have taken sizable tumbles.

On the American Stock Exchange, prices were lower in moderate trading. Syntex was the most active issue, up 1-8 at 82 3-4 on 33,400 shares.

Transamerica Buys Santa Rosa Firm

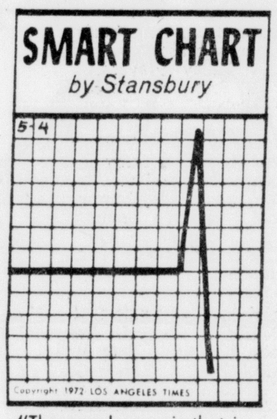

Transamerica Title Insurance Co. has acquired Redwood Empire Title Co. of Santa Rosa.

Redwood Empire Title, which has been issuing the insurance policies of Transamerica Title since 1965, will retain its name and present office management. The firm has one office in Petaluma, one in Sebastopol and two in Santa Rosa.

Housing Firm Posts Earnings

LOS ANGELES (BW) — Sharply higher first quarter sales and earnings have been reported by the McCarthy Co., California-based developer of single-family and multi-family housing.

Net sales for the quarter rose to $4,521,000, almost a five-fold increase from sales of $953,000 in the first quarter of 1971. Net income increased at an even more rapid rate, rising to $118,000, or 8 cents per share fully diluted, from $17,000, or 1 cent per share, in the first quarter of 1971.

"The good news is that investors say our profits are understated. The bad news is that the IRS agrees."

Spear Sees Good Decade In Market

I-J Special Report

BABSON PARK, Mass. — In an unusual analysis of the Dow-Jones Average, Roger E. Spear, president of Spear & Staff, Inc., the investment advisory firm, sees the possibility of the Dow-Jones Average ranging between 1128 and 1435 by 1975 and between 1404 and 1787 by 1980.

Spear, whose column "Successful Investing" appears daily on the Independent-Journal business page, bases these projections on a study of the Dow stocks.

He reports that "the book value climbed 55.0 per cent in the ten years ending 1970, a compound annual rate of 4.5 per cent. The climb was very steady from year to year," Spear says, "with only one minor dip in 1964.

"While many analysts discount the worth of book value in evaluating a particular stock," Spear points out, "it is nevertheless true that assets are a cushion under price on the assumption either that management, using these assets, can bring about a recovery in earnings, or a buyer of the company is willing to pay for those assets plus a premium for potential earning power.

"Since the mid-60s and excluding the bad years 1970-1971," Spear goes on to say, "the Dow has averaged to sell at 1.75 times its book value." Projecting the book value at the 4.5 per cent compound annual rate and using the minimum and maximum price-to-book-value ratio Spear arrives at his projections.

"Of course," Spear concludes, "the growth in earnings is a very important factor. The Dow's earnings do grow, albeit the growth curve is quite cyclical, being subject to rather pronounced advances followed by sidewise trends - plateaus so to speak. For the past five years the Dow's earnings have been running along one of these plateaus. There seems good reason to believe that the 1970s will see another pronounced advance, perhaps into the $80-$100 range. This would justify an advance in the average to at least the mid-1000s.

"Whether such a level develops," Spear concludes, "there is ample support for the opinion that the Dow will move substantially higher in the present decade. This will provide a highly favorable market climate for large advances in the stocks of burgeoning industries, fast growth issues and special-situation stocks."

Bicycle Shop, Repair Service Moving Into Bel Aire Center

A bicycle shop and repair service is planned at Bel Aire Shopping Center where new owners will take over Alfie's Variety Store in a couple of weeks.

New owners will be Erland T. Koski and family of Mill Valley. Harry Abras of Don Timmer Realty negotiated the sale.

Koski, a utility company executive in San Francisco, said the store will be operated by his wife, Lillian, and their three sons, Erik, David and Donald.

The store will get a new name, but the decision has not been made as yet. Mrs. Koski said it will take several weeks before bicycle sales and repair can be introduced. This service would be in addition to the notions and gifts now carried by Alfie's.

Michael Lagomarsino, who has operated Alfie's for about two years, plans to go to Laguna Beach to make a record album. He is an accomplished guitarist.

A woman in Belvedere had been negotiating for purchase of Alfie's several weeks ago, but the deal fell through, and Koski bought it instead.

JOHN A. OSTROM of Belvedere, formerly manager of division services in Bechtel Corp.'s mining and metals division, has been appointed a project manager in the company's power and industrial division.

His new duties will take him into Bechtel's atomic power plant field as manager of a major nuclear project. Ostrom has been with Bechtel for 19 years, serving in various managerial positions.

CHARLES H. DUTKIN of Tiburon has been promoted to assistant trust officer in the San Francisco trust department of United California Bank. Dutkin joined United California Bank in 1971.

NEED A SPEAKER? Waldron & Co., Inc. of San Rafael, members of the Pacific Coast Stock Exchange, will furnish a speaker for one of your forthcoming meetings to discuss various topics relating to the national economy, stock market, the pros and cons of stocks, bonds, mutual funds, etc.

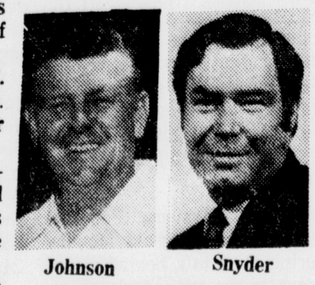

Organizations interested in such a speaker should contact Paul Mendelsohn, vice president of Waldron & Co.

ROBERT L. JOHNSON of Petaluma, a member of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in San Rafael, was picked to participate in a four-day business conference with officers of Metropolitan Life in Hollywood, Fla., last week.

Johnson was selected as one of the leaders among Metropolitan Life's sales representatives in the United States and Canada. He placed more than $1,300,000 in individual life insurance last year.

LYNN E. SNYDER of San Rafael recently completed a seminar at The Hartford advancement center in Hartford, Conn. He was one of 31 employees selected to participate in the seminar, which provided updated information on current industry trends and job-related skills.

ROBERT E. (Bob) RICH of San Rafael, formerly president of the Associated Dredging Co. of Sausalito, has joined Frank Deimel and Associates, real estate and insurance brokers, in the Masonic Building, San Rafael.

Deimel is associated with Howard M. Morse Insurance Agency of 1414 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael.

AIRPORT LIMOUSINE Service in Sausalito provides a relatively inexpensive ride ($6 per passenger) between Edgewater Inn, Corte Madera, and the San Francisco Imternational Airport.

This is how it works: You call up Airport Limousine at least four hours in advance to make reservations.

William Melbern, operator of the service, schedules limousines to leave the Edgewater at 6 a.m. and every two hours thereafter until 8 p.m. At the appointed time, you drive to Edgewater Inn, park your car free at the Standard Station, and hop the limousine.

If you want to catch the limousine at the airport for the return trip to Corte Madera, you must make reservations with Melbern. The limousine can pick you up on the island of the Central Terminal at the airport at 7 a.m. and every two hours thereafter, until 9 p.m.

On Saturdays and Sundays, the service is only until noon.

The important thing, said Melbern, is to make reservations in advance because the limousine runs every two hours, only if a customer is booked for that hour.

Airport Limousine Service also operates a door-to-door service, but this, of course, is much more expensive.

The award, based on outstanding sales performance in 1971, also includes a trip for him and his wife, Joy, to Acapulco. The award was for substantially increasing sales in "Industrial Research Magazine."

Woman, 20 Pleads To New Count

A Fairfax woman, arrested the day before she was to begin serving a jail term on a forgery conviction, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to the new charge of possessing stolen property.

A preliminary hearing was set for next Thursday for Pamela Mae Wilson, 20, of Fairfax. Her husband was to plead today to burglary and two counts of having stolen property.

The Wilsons were arrested last Thursday, a day after police had stopped their car in Fairfax and found a stereo system and television set taken in a burglary the day before.

Charles Wilson, 22, also is charged with having property taken in a burglary April 10 in Fairfax.

Mrs. Wilson is now serving time in the county jail until she is old enough to begin methadone treatment for heroin addiction.

New Plane Arrives At Hamilton

The 904th Tactical Airlift Group at Hamilton Air Force Base, a reserve group recently placed on "ready reserve" status, greeted its "new bird" yesterday, a C130B Hercules transport.

The four-engine turbojet, squat and sturdy, has been a workhorse in Vietnam, earning such nicknames as the "garbage truck" and the "Klong Hopper Airlines."

A multipurpose air transport, it can land and take off on a short runway, 3,500 feet, emergency landing fields or rough forward airstrips.

It can cruise at speeds up to 360 miles an hour, at heights up to 40,000 feet and carry up to 50,000 pounds.

The C130B also can fly over a field and deliver equipment at low altitude, five to eight feet, through its rear door with a parachute system.

The group is scheduled to receive eight C130B aircraft to replace its eight C124s.

The first one was flown in yesterday from Andrews Air Force Base, Washington, D.C., by Capt. David Harrinton, who turned it over to Capt. Charles Collins, a pilot he had worked with in Vietnam.

The plane is 97 feet 8 inches long, 38 feet high and has a wing span of 132 feet, 7 inches. It can be used for high altitude, mapping, weather reconnaissance, search and rescue, fighting forest fires, flight refueling, ferrying fuel and high altitude drone launching.

Boy's Club Starts J. E. Hoover Award

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Boys' Club of America announced Wednesday it is setting up a J. Edgar Hoover freedom award to be given annually to "that American who best typifies those principles to which Mr. Hoover dedicated his life."

The FBI director, who died Tuesday, was a member of the organization's board of directors for more than 30 years.

Flea Market Set Saturday

A day-long flea market will be held Saturday at Wade Thomas School in San Anselmo.

Proceeds will benefit the school's sixth-grade outdoor education program, according to spokesman Peggy A. Farey. It will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Among items to be sold will be weavings by sixth-graders, candles and other handcrafts, Mrs. Farey said.

Director Of Bolinas PUD Enters Plea To Vandalism

A director of the Bolinas Public Utilities District has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to charges he vandalized the property of two men who opposed board policy.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Peter W. Evans linked the incident to a development disagreement bubbling since four new board members took office last November in an election which saw two incumbents recalled.

The new board immediately angered property owners by slapping an indefinited moratorium on water connections, then upped water charges and levied sewer charges against downtown property.

Also in dispute is a waste disposal system the board wants to keep small to limit population. Landowners object.

Hewlett was arrested on complaints by West, Creitz and Charles L. Pepper, owner of the real estate building. Hewlett is said to have called Creitz to apologize after the tire slashing.

Auto Recalls At Record 9 Million

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Automobile manufacturers recalled a record setting 9 million cars and trucks in 1971, eight times the 1970 total, the government said Wednesday.

The Transportation Department said the sharp jump in recalls stemmed mainly from General Motors' decision to recall 6,682,000 Chevrolet models produced between 1965 through 1969. The cars were recalled to correct possible engine mount defects.

In 1970, domestic automakers ordered 100 separate recalls involving 740,000 cars. Foreign automakers conducted 54 recall campaigns involving more than 500,000 cars for an overall total of 1.24 million cars recalled.
